Draft Bill Has Majority Of Senators In Committee

Members Say Vote On Conscription May Be Unanimous; Hearing Set Today

Millions for Defense

By John G. Norris.
Post Staff Writer

A majority of the Senate Military Affairs Committee is prepared to approve some form of compulsory military service and in the opinion of many members the committee vote on conscription will be virtually unanimous.

This was disclosed by a private poll of the group as it prepared to meet this morning and receive from the War Department a revised edition of the Burke-Wadsworth draft bill, incorporating the Administration's views on the controversial subject.

Army officials will meet with the committee behind closed doors to discuss amendments to the bill and tell how many men it plans to call in the coming year. The War Department, it is understood, will declare it wants approximately 1,500,000 drafted during the first 12 months.

Eleven of Eighteen in Favor

The committee pool showed 11 of the 18 members of the group disposed to vote for some form of compulsory military service, one probably opposed and six out of the city.

None would indorse the Burke-Wadsworth bill and several who favored compulsory service in principle said they would not vote for the measure as it now stands. Practically all believed some legislation will be approved by the committee this week and voted by Congress shortly after.

According to members who have been in touch with the War Department, the amendments to be presented this morning will incorporate the suggestions made by Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, before the group ten days ago, as well as some additional changes.

Gurney Tells of Changes

Senator Gurney (Republican), of South Dakota, said he understood one amendment would extend exemptions to youths in college, permitting them to conclude their education before taking military service. Another, he said, would exempt members of the National Guard from being called to avoid breaking up existing trained units in the Guard.

Another member said an amendment might be presented to make the legislation effective only for a limited time. In his testimony, Gen. Marshall proposed that the training period be increased from the eight months provided in the bill to from 15 to 18 months and that men in training be paid the regular Army pay of $21 a month rather than $6 a month set forth in the measure.

Under the War Department plans for calling 1,500,000 men the first year of conscription, from 300,000 to 400,000 would be inducted into service in October, about 15,000 in November, 10,000 in December and

Lone Ranger Rides Off

Garner Takes Train Home, May Stay There Rest of Term

"KEEP YOUR CHIN UP, MAMA"—It took a little Vice Presidential chucking to keep up the chin of the almost tearful Mrs. Garner as they left Union Station last night for their Texas home for an indefinite stay

Vice President Garner, the lone ranger of Democratic politics, rode out of town last night. He was headed for home, some believed for the remainder of his term.

The white-browed Texan boarded a Southern Railroad express for his home town of Uvalde at 6:45 o'clock last night.

A host of friends who bade him and Mrs. Garner good-by at their Capitol office and again at Union Station were told only that the Vice President was going home to vote in the Texas primaries, as he had for 50 years.

"Are you coming back?", a reporter asked.

"I'll reserve my decision on that," he replied. "I have a leader who waits until the last minute to make up his mind," the Vice President said dryly, in an obvious reference to President Roosevelt's failure to make known his attitude toward a third term until the Chicago convention had convened.

But among Texans in Congress and elsewhere in Washington there persisted the feeling that they might never again hear his rasping voice

Hull Pledges Full U. S. Aid To Americas

Leadership, Money Ready to Resist Dictators, He Tells Havana Conference

Material Action

Warning Reaffirmed

By the Associated Press

Havana, July 22.—The United States offered Latin America its leadership and dollars today in a bold fight against the totalitarian system of self-sufficient economy, and called for joint trusteeship over any European colonies in the Western Hemisphere threatened with transfer to any other European powers.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull, defining the program of his country before the second conference of American foreign ministers, put the plan on a cooperative basis but clearly indicated the United States was ready to throw its full resources behind its execution.

In his speech, expected to assume the status of a policy-guiding declaration for the conference, Hull sharply condemned "forces of ruthless conquest which shrink from no means of attaining their ends."

Warning to Dictators

Pointedly, he served notice that the United States would not countenance any effort to "modify the existing status" of European posessions in the Western World, "whether by cession, by transfer or by any impairment whatsoever in the control heretofore exercised."

He gave the United States' indorsement for a protectorate by all the Americas over any threatened European holdings on this side of the Atlantic.

His words gave further emphasis to an already formally presented note warning Germany and Italy the United States would resist, alone if necessary, any attempt to lay hands on French, British or Netherlands colonies in the New World.

Roosevelt Action Cheered

Hull spoke at an open afternoon session in Cuba's great marble capital, following a closed morning session at which commissions were set up to deal with vital problems of hemisphere defense and economy.

At the morning session the United States took a place on the important peace commission, which is to canvass the whole question of continental defense as well as the future status of European colonies in the Americas.

On the economic side, Hull presented a program designed to relieve existing distress and to set up long-range preparations to meet

Revolt Move Grows

By William V. Nessly.
Post Staff Writer

A well-defined Democratic "sit-down" against the third term appeared to be developing on Capitol Hill yesterday.

By nightfall its proportions led one figure close to the movement to forecast that no fewer than 18, and possibly 21 Democratic Senators actually will vote for Wendell Willkie, Republican nominee for President, and that others will contribute no efforts toward his defeat.

Other well-known Democratic figures, meanwhile, continued to go over to the Willkie forces at the very start of what promises to be one of the strangest campaigns the country has seen.

Lewis W. Douglas, President Roosevelt's first Director of the Budget, and John W. Hanes, who served under Mr. Roosevelt as member of the Securities and Exchange Commission and as Assistant Secretary and Undersecretary of the Treasury, jointly notified the Republican choice that they would work for his election over their former chief.

They wired Willkie:

"We, the undersigned, lifelong members of the Democratic Party, are deeply disturbed by the developments at the recent Democratic Convention in Chicago. They constitute the first organized effort in American history to keep the same national Administration in public office beyond the historic two-term period.

To Enlist Democrats

"No matter how grave the national emergency, the continuation in authority for three terms of this political machine, clothed as it is with tremendous public power, is a still graver menace to America. We submit that this effort should be resisted without regard to partisan politics by all who would preserve democracy in the United States.

"We, therefore, propose with your approval to enlist in your behalf the support of Democrats who believe with us that loyalty to country takes precedence over party loyalty."

The telegram was also signed by Mrs. Roberta Campbell Lawson, of Tulsa, Okla., former president of the Federated Women's Clubs of America.

In a separate message, Alan Valentine, president of Rochester University and a former New Deal supporter, wired Willkie that he

Republicans Challenge Democrats to Act Now On District Suffrage

House Legislation Asked This Session To 'Prove Sincerity' Of Platform Plank

By James D. Secrest

The Democratic leadership in the House was challenged yesterday by House Republicans to prove the sincerity of the District suffrage plank in the Democratic platform by bringing out appropriate legislation for a vote before Congress adjourns.

Representative Rees (Republican), of Kansas, interrupted a speech by Chairman Randolph, of the House District Committee, to ask:

"In view of the fact that the Democratic Party is in charge in the House and the Senate and that we have a President who is the head of that party, is there any reason why you should not go right along and pass such legislation at the present session, since we are going to be here for some time?"

Predicts G. O. P. Support

Rees said he was sure many Republicans would join in approving the legislation on a non-partisan basis.

Randolph replied that he "hoped" that Chairman Sumners of the House Judiciary Committee would take the leadership, "because he holds a key position, and see that a vote is taken in the Judiciary Committee so that the bill may be brought before the House for consideration."

"I believe that it is highly significant," said Randolph, "that the chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, after long service in this body, has found himself in agreement with the extension of voting privileges to the men and women who live here and he has introduced a resolution to bring that about."

Representative Summers, who introduced his resolution on April 4, 1939, was out of the city. The Judiciary Committee has never acted on his resolution, which proposes a Constitutional amendment for modified national representation and local self-government which would be subject to repeal by Congress.

Resolutions Text

"The Congress shall have power to provide for the people of the District constituting the seat of the Government of the United States representation in the Congress and among the electors of President and Vice President no greater than that of the people of the States and to delegate to such government as Congress may establish therein all or any of its power over said District; and the judicial power of the United States shall extend to controversies to which citizens of said District shall be parties the same as to controversies to which citizens of a State shall be parties.

Opposes Partisanship

"All legislation hereunder shall be subject to amendment and repeal: Provided, that no amendment or repeal shall affect the office of a Senator or Representative during the time for which he was elected."

Most of the applause came from the Republican side of the House after Randolph had concluded his speech. Majority leaders were notably absent while he talked.

Rees, who several times arose to suggest that action be taken on the subject at this session of Congress, said at one time:

"Why in the world bother about putting it into your platform, if you are in earnest about it? I am sure the gentleman before the House is in earnest about it. Why not go along and get it up before the House?

"You have a majority of the committee in charge of the measure, so

When It's Bad It's Torrid

22 Collapse as Heat Hits 96; Even Weather Man Goes Home

25,000 Government Workers Let Off As Humidity Intensifies Discomfort; No Relief Is Forecast for Today

(When Is It Too Hot to Work? See Page 3.)

No relief. That was the Weather Bureau's forecast last night for Washington after a day when the temperature climbed to 96 at 3:15 p. m., causing the collapse of 22 persons in the District. The relative humidity was 42 per cent at the highest temperature.

Nearly 25,000 Government employes were released from the departments of Agriculture, Commerce and War, the Veterans' Administration, the General Accounting Office, WPA, RFC and other agencies early in the afternoon.

It was so hot even the weather man went home. Only a skeleton staff remained at the Weather Bureau's nonair-conditioned building to tell the public today would be "partly cloudy and warm."

A relative humidity high of 67 per cent at 6 p. m. when the temperature was 84 followed scattered light showers which brought added discomfort instead of relief. Public parks, swimming pools and air-conditioned movies were crowded with persons, each of whom seemed to have a different theory on how to keep cool.

The forecast last night held out no hopes of an end of the heat wave with continued abnormal high temperatures expected at least through Thursday.

There was, however, the possibility of brief respites both today and tomorrow in the way of thundershowers.

Yesterday was the Capital's fifth consecutive day in which the mercury rose above 90. High points for the period include 93, Thursday; 93, Friday; 97, Saturday; 96, Sunday; 96, Monday. Predicted high for today, 95.

Washington was not much worse off than the rest of the Nation, where sizzling temperatures continued unabated except for some areas of northern New England and on the West Coast. A survey showed at least 135 deaths, 25 caused directly by the heat, and 110 by drowning.

Whether or not the District was the Nation's uncomfortable spot yes-

Halifax Turns Down Hitler's Offer of Peace

Terms Have Nothing Of Justice in Them, Briton Declares

By the United Press

London, July 22.—Viscount Halifax, British foreign secretary, tonight rejected Adolf Hitler's "final appeal to reason" and asserted that Great Britain will fight on until the Fuehrer's "mad plans for Europe" are completely shattered and the liberties of all nations are restored.

Speaking by radio to the people of Britain and the world, the tall, gaunt-faced cabinet minister said Britain would fight to the bitter end because Hitler in his Reichstag speech last Friday offered nothing in the way of a peace with justice.

The original text of Lord Halifax's speech was changed in many places only a few minutes before he stepped before the microphone, and various sentences which might have been interpreted in some quarters as a bid for Hitler to make a new and more generous peace offer were stricken out.

As he spoke, Lord Halifax seemed to falter at these revised portions of his manuscript.

"We never wanted the war; certainly no one here wants the war to go on for a day longer than is necessary," he said. "But we shall not stop fighting until freedom for ourselves and others is secure.

Lord Halifax said that in America Hitler's aggression was being

Axis Reported Sealing Fate Of Rumania

Carol May Lose Crown As Hitler, Duce Decide To Back Hungary

By International News Service

Budapest, July 22.—Indication that Germany and Italy had reached a decision on the future of Rumania was seen tonight in an announcement in Bucharest that Nazi Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop had summoned Rumanian Premier Ion Gigurtu and Foreign Minister Manoilescu to Salzburg for a conference Friday.

This gave new weight to earlier reports that the Axis powers had decided to back to the limit Hungarian claims for the return of Transylvania and gave rise to predictions of a new crisis in which King Carol might lose his Rumanian throne.

Balkan political circles linked the announcement that Gigurtu and Manoilescu had been summoned to Germany with reports of a secret week-end conference between Gigurtu, Dr. Fabricus, Nazi envoy to Bucharest, and Pellegrino Chigi, Italian Minister at Constanza, fashionable Black Sea beach resort.

In conference over the week-end, Premier Gigurtu told the German and Italian statesmen the desperate plight of Rumania if the Rome-Berlin Axis presses Carol for total satisfaction of Hungary's claims.

Returning to Bucharest today, Girgurtu immediately hurried to an audience with King Carol.

Churchill to Quit Within 24 Hours, Rome Paper Says

Rome, July 22 (U.P.).—The newspaper La Tribuna published a dispatch under a Basle, Switzerland, date line today which said Prime Minister Winston Churchill's government would resign within the next 24 hours.

The dispatch asserted that the resignation will come about in such a manner as not to appear a consequence of Adolf Hitler's Reichstag speech, but rather due to the budget issue.

"Commons could be maneuvered in such manner as to refuse to accept the budget, thus forcing the government to resign," the dispatch said.

U. S. Fleet Sails On Secret South Pacific Patrol

Honolulu, July 22 (A.P.).—Secret operations kept major units of the United States Fleet on the high seas today.

It was understood movements of some units would extend below the Equator. There have been reports the United States is planning to patrol all southern islands east of the International Dateline.

Lahaina Roads, Maui Island, where most of the fleet had been based during a scheduled three-week maneuvers and target practice, was evacuated Friday. Shore patrol headquarters at Maui has been discontinued for an indefinite period.

D. C. Needy To Get 5-Cent Milk Aug. 12

Signing of Contract Allows Limited Amounts To 11,400 Families

The final bit of red tape involved in bringing milk to Washington families on relief was cut yesterday as the Surplus Marketing Administration of the Agriculture Department announced it had accepted a bid for supplying the milk and that distribution will start August 12.

An estimate of 11,400 relief cases will be eligible to purchase a limited amout of the milk at the rate of 5 cents a quart from ten depots maintained by the Welfare Department in scattered sections of the Capital.

The Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase Dairy was awarded the contract to furnish the milk at 2.7 cents a quart, to be paid by the Federal Government, plus the 5 cents paid by eligible low-income families.

Must Present Cards

The Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association agreed early this year to furnish the milk at a special price to the handler for sale exclusively to relief groups. Provision for the sale was made in the Federal milk marketing order governing this milkshed.

The relief program is operative only until the end of the fiscal year, June 30, 1941, unless renewed.

Eligible purchasers will be required to present milk cards, which are to be provided after investigation by WPA employes under the direction of the Welfare Department. The dairy will have one of its representatives at each of the depots.

A pint of milk a day will be allowed eligible persons under 17 years of age, expectant or nursing

President Hits Examining Boards in D. C.

Vetoes Bill to Create Regulatory Unit For Embalmers Here

President Roosevelt yesterday criticized the growth of the present system of quasi-private examining boards in Washington as he vetoed a bill to establish a board of funeral directors and embalmers and a measure to provide free water to charitable institutions.

The funeral regulatory bill proposed to set up a board of nine examiners appointed by the Commissioners.

Quoting the District heads' opposition to the bill, the veto message said that although the measure claimed to have as its purpose the protection of public health, "a study of its subsequent provisions, however, appears to indicate that its primary purpose is to place certain restrictions on those desiring to enter the business of embalming and funeral directing in the District of Columbia."

Already Covered by Law

The message went on:

"The first purpose is already cared for by present health laws which grant full authority to the commissioners of the District of Columbia to make and enforce, through the health department, such regulations as may be necessary to protect the public.

"A second result of the bill would be to create, outside the control of the commissioners, another independent District establishment, armed with the power to restrict membership in the guild of funeral directors and embalmers.

"The present system of quasi-private examining boards in the District of Columbia, with their lack

The model community of Greenbelt, Md., became Utopia last night for 15 European children who only a few months ago studied and played by the prescription of Adolf Hitler.

Refugees from Germany and Austria whose families for the most part fled racial persecution, they came to possess the town for two weeks' vacation, with free swimming and movies, and fishing in the Greenbelt Lake restricted solely by luck.

Fifteen Greenbelt families, Christian and Jewish, made them a part of their own households, companions at the dinner table and playmates of their children.

One couple, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McNamara, took 12-year-old Walter Kulka in the absence of one of their own seven children. Walter, with his family, fled Vienna after Anschluss and after his father, a Viennese pathologist who now works without pay to gain experience in an Ameri... n given a taste of "beatin, ... and tnings."

Walter said the Nazis struck with "the mailed glove," an adaptation, it was presumed, of the American "brass knuckles."

The children rode into Union Station at 4:30 p. m. in a Pennsylvania Railroad train, chaperoned by Mildred Stadholz of the National Refugee Service, New York refugee coordinating organization.

They were in the mood of

Rockville Jury Acquits Ten Of Jehovah Witness Rioting

A Montgomery County jury last night acquitted ten Rockville, Md., men of rioting June 19 in connection with a mob attack on a Jehovah's Witness meeting in Rockville.

The shirt-sleeved jurors deliberated 35 minutes and handed down their verdict shortly after 8 p. m.

Those acquitted were Buck Cornwell, Jack Mattox, Goldsboro Borrows, John E. Barrett, George Mullican, Joseph Fisher, James Foster, Benjamin A. Burroughs, Roscoe Cope and Raymond Davis.

Warned by Circuit Judge Charles W. Woodward against any demonstrations, spectators remained silent as the jury foreman said "not guilty" when the name of each defendant was read.

When the jurors filed into the courtroom Judge Woodward delayed announcement of the verdict to lecture briefly on the constitutional rights of freedom of religion and freedom of assembly.

Speaking to the young defendants, he explained it was against the religious principles of Jehovah's Witnesses to salute the American flag and "although you may hold in utmost contempt their refusal" there still is no law to force them to do so.

"You are patriotic," he told the young men who broke up the Jehovah's Witnesses' meeting because they refused to salute the Stars and Stripes. "But don't forget the Constitution also protects you. They are in the minority today. In a few years they may be in the majority."

U. S. Makes It Easier To Get Your Taxes; Duplicate Barred

To make it easier to pay more taxes, the Treasury yesterday abolished the duplicate "green copy" of income tax blanks that have been required since 1935.

If it is any consolation next March 15, income tax returns for the year beginning December 31, 1939, will need to be filled out only on a single copy.

Officials said the original intent of the green copy, to disclose to local authorities the names of persons having tangible or other taxable property, had been accomplished.

9-Year-Old Boy Drowns in Canal; Body Recovered

Harbor police last night recovered the body of a 9-year-old colored boy, who drowned in the C. & O Canal at Thirtieth street northwest when he fell into the water while trying to recover a rubber ball.

The youngster, Eddie Shine, of 2635 Virginia avenue northwest, apparently lost his balance when he reached for the ball from a pile of rocks close to the canal wall. He had been playing "catch" with his three brothers, Edward, a twin; Roland, 12, and Harvey, 8.

Roland said he grabbed for Eddie as he plunged.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

The wife of Italy's Ambassador is the only diplomat's wife here who gets a salary from her government . . . To hold Il Duce's end up . . . Governors of the 48 States are outranked here by 182 Washington officials—President and V. P., Supreme Court, ambassadors and ministers, Senators and Cabinet members.

Taft once chided a man who addressed him as "Chief Justice of the Supreme Court" instead of "Chief Justice of the United States." . . . It was Calvin Coolidge who wrote the best justification for the Capital's complex etiquette—roughly "it honors the job, not the man," and "it avoids confusion."

Some invited guests here phone to find out where they're to be seated at a dinner, and if they're discontented they decline to come . . . On delicate problems of etiquette, hostesses ask the State Department, and if necessary the State Department asks foreign diplomats, if they're involved.

A few high officials know now where they'll dine on certain dates in December and January . . . The feud between Senate and Cabinet as to precedence has never really been settled . . . And the same goes for the Speaker and the Vice President . . . Some speakers deem themselves second only to the President.

Strict etiquette requires that lofty personages be escorted outdoors to their cars after a dinner, even if it's snowing . . . If the President be a bachelor or if his wife is ill and another lady is to be his dinner partner at a rare dinner outside the White House, she picks him up there.

White House table conversation at big dinners usually steers around debatable public matters . . . Hazen Drops In To Make Quorum Of Commissioners

For the first time in two weeks there was a quorum of Commissioners at the District Building yesterday.

Although the building closed at 2:30 p. m. because of the heat and all employes, except a few who couldn't be spared, fled to cooler places, Commissioners Hazen and McCoach put in several sweltering hours at their desks. Commissioner Young was the only absentee and he will be back on the job today.

$500,000,000 Trade War Chest Sped by Congress

Bills Offered to Fight Nazis Economically In This Hemisphere

President Roosevelt asked Congress yesterday for a $500,000,000 economic weapon with which to fight the Nazi trade blitzkrieg in this hemisphere.

Coinciding in its delivery with the opening in Havana of the crucial meeting of foreign ministers from 21 American republics, the message asked that Congress add half a billion dollars to the $200,000,000 lending power of the Export-Import Bank and at the same time remove "some of the restrictions on its operations."

As Government trade experts pointed to increased reports that "divisions" of German merchants are traveling through Latin America arranging barter deals with promises of deliveries "in the fall," Congress responded immediately to the President's request. Bills to that end were introduced by Senator Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, for Chairman Wagner (Democrat), of New York, of the Senate Banking Committee and in the House by Chairman Steagall (Democrat), of Alabama, of the House Banking Committee.

Trade Dislocated

The trade defense fund would be used to finance "the handling and orderly marketing" of agricultural surpluses in nations to the South, the President's message said.

Noting that all American republics sell, and "should sell," surplus products to other parts of the world, the President pointed out that the war had dislocated this trade.

"Until liberal commercial policies are restored and fair trading on a commercial plane is reopened, distress many be continued," the President told Congress.

The message emphasized that the loans are to meet a temporary situation.

"Free Hand" Asked

"It is to be hoped that before another year world trade can be reestablished, but pending this adjustment we in the United States should join with the peoples of other republics of the Western Hemisphere in meeting their problems," the message said.

Asking that the bank's directors be given a "free hand" in making the loans, the President made plain the purpose of his request by saying:

"Unless exporting countries are able to assist their nationals, they will be forced to bargain as best they can."

Added force was given to the President's request by the fact that a few hours later in the day Secretary of State Hull, at Havana, told Pan-American delegates that the United States favored "creation of facilities for the temporary handling and orderly marketing of accumulated surpluses of those commodities which are of primary importance to the maintenance of the economic life of the American republics, whenever such action becomes necessary."

Officials familiar with what the President has in mind disclosed yesterday that the $500,000,000 trade war chest, a revolving fund, would supersede for the time being the so-called "cartel" which was once favored by the Administration for combatting Nazi trade inroads.

The enlarged lending authority for the Export-Import Bank would be the first step, officials said, in the program to bulwark Latin-American nations against German economic putsches.

The $500,000,000 fund would be used only to meet emergency situations where top-heavy surpluses create a tempting field for German trade agents to operate, these officials explained.

The first duties of the fund's administrators might be to help out Brazil with its abnormal coffee surplus and ease the strain of Argentina's corn surplus, rather than leave these nations to make a barter bargain with Germany on disadvantageous terms.

No Desire to "Blockade" Reich

President Roosevelt's message, released at the White House although he was resting at Hyde Park, N. Y., denied any desire, however, "to blockade Germany, or cut her off from the products of this hemisphere.

"No sensible persons would advocate an attempt to prevent the normal exchange of commodities between other continents and the Americas, but what can and should be done," the President wrote, "is to prevent effective fluctuations caused by distressed selling resulting from temporary interruption in the flow of trade, or the fact that there has not yet been reestablished a system of free exchange."

Acting White House Secretary William D. Hassett said at Hyde Park, N. Y., that the Export-Import Bank plan would supplement, rather than replace, the cartel program, which is of a more ambitious nature.

The legislation introduced to give life to the Export-Import Bank plan would, besides raising the bank's lending authority to $700,000,000, remove a restriction of $20,000,000 on loans to any one country. Further, the legislation would allow direct loans to buy up surplus products, whereas the bank's present powers permit it only to extend credits to American firms that want to ship their products abroad.

Experts said yesterday that the plan would probably be carried out by setting up a corporation under Reconstruction Finance Act powers, this corporation to finance the storing and marketing of Latin American products.

Speedy action was the goal of Chairmen Wagner and Steagall. They hoped to have heard the testimony of Loan Administrator Jesse Jones and other officials before the week is out and pass the legislation before the Havana conference closes.

Roosevelt Gets Report on France's Downfall

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Roosevelt, Bullitt Discuss French Credits

Hyde Park Parley On Whether Petain Can Bar Wealth to Nazis

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Hyde Park, N. Y., July 22.—The ultimate decision on Franco-American relations and the disposition of approximately $2,000,000,000 in French assets now frozen in this country probably will be decided here during the next few days as the result of prolonged discussions between President Roosevelt and William C. Bullitt, American Ambassador to France.

The Ambassador, his work intensified and confused by the Nazi invasion of France, had been out of touch with the President and the State Department since June 12, and his reports and questions were so complex that Mr. Roosevelt asked him to make the trip to Hyde Park to continue the discussions.

Today the Ambassador sent for his daughter, Anne, to join him here. Indicating that he will remain until the President leaves, probably on Saturday night.

Bullitt, talking to reporters, indicated that he favored continued relations with the government of Marshal Henri Petain, premier of the French government now established at Vichy, France. This weakened rumors of American support for British recognition of the fugitive French government, now in exile in London, headed by Gen. Charles de Gaulle.

The Ambassador had given notice of such action when interviewed in New York on Saturday.

"I don't know that you are right in calling the regime Fascist," he said at that time.

Bullitt was asked if recognition of the Petain government would not force this government to release the credits, thus leaving them open to seizure by Germany. He would say only that the Government's relations with France existed just as they had existed before; that there was no question of dropping relations or changing relations. The question of the frozen credits, he said, have not been discussed during his sessions with the President.

Refugees to Be Discussed

The freezing of credits by this country started with the Nazi invasion in Europe. The policy has been to hold all assets of dominated nations to make certain that Germany could gain no advantages with the property of such nations as Denmark, Norway, Belgium and Holland. Mr. Roosevelt apparently hopes to discover from Mr. Bullitt whether the Petain government would hold sufficient independence to restore its financial balance with gain to the French people and no aid to the Nazis.

The Ambassador indicated that his conversations with the President also would cover the refugee problem. He expressed great concern over the plight of the homeless. More than 10,500,000 Belgian, Dutch and French refugees already were concentrated in the southwest of France, undergoing terrible hardships, he said.

The President will hold a press conference tomorrow, which may reveal a great deal on his political actions in the future, and his attitude toward the Petain government.

Boy, 2, Is Recovering From Two-Story Plunge postwar world conditions.

The delegates greeted warmly President Roosevelt's recommendation to Congress for aid in disposition of Latin American surplus commodities through the Export-Import Bank.

Speaking for Argentina, Leopoldo Melo said that Argentina identified herself with the future destiny of America but warned the delegates that they must not "pretend to dictate formulas" for conduct entirely predicated on the future.

Urges Equality for All

He said such a course would be in vain because of rapid changes which might bring about a situation in which the nations of America would find themselves proceeding on a "conjectural hypothesis."

Melo told the delegates they should remember the custom of this hemisphere always has been to treat "all nations of the world" with equality.

The chief of the Uruguayan delegation, Leopoldo Manini Rios, whose country recently has been disturbed by fifth column activities, told the delegates they should adopt measures for the repression of these activities and for the defense of the hemisphere.

He declared that world changes of a violent, fundamental character made it imperative that the Americas face a few questions "not only on the matter of vigilance, but on methods of repression against the illicit and harmful activities against our sovereignty, which political organizations foreign to our continent are employing."

Dr. Leo S. Rowe, director-general of the Pan American Union, described as "good news which comes at the right psychological moment" Mr. Roosevelt's action in seeking a $500,000 increase in the bank's lending capacity for the purpose.

Ambassador Jose Santiago Rodriguez, the Venezuelan delegate, said the President's action as "a magnificent gesture."

The Bolivian, Chilean and Argentine delegates likewise expressed a firm approval of the Presidential action.

Hull urged creation of facilities for temporary marketing of surplus commodities and the development of agreements to assure equity for producers and consumers.

To Counteract Bartering

The first step is designed to thwart any attempt by Germany or others to gain economic, then political domination of any American country through individual barter dealings.

The second step is intended more for long-range development of special commodity agreements or pools, apparently patterned after the international rubber and tin cartels. This plan, bordering on monopolistic control, is broad enough to take in any important commodity, such as coffee, wheat, meat and minerals which some countries must export to live.

Hull indicated one method of disposing of present large surpluses might be relief distribution.

The Inter-American Bank also promised to play an important part in the economic program. The bank, not yet in operation, due to lack of ratifications, was proposed at the Panama meeting last year. It would be capitalized at $100,000,000.

Miguel A. Campa, Cuban secretary of state and conference president, joined Hull in denouncing "selfish and implacable military imperialism."

He told the conference:

"Men from other latitudes, with totally different notions of our broad and generous conception of life are a cause of anxiety to the people of the Americas, taking advantage of an easy infiltration so, perhaps at an opportune time, they might violate our faith and take possession of the gifts nature has bestowed upon this continent.

"We must abandon merely precautionary methods and enter fully upon a very acute period of vigilant activity of a marked defensive character. To meet such a situation it might not suffice to establish a sanitary cordon to prevent our being reached by the destructive effects of hatred."

Eduardo Suarez, Mexican delegate, called for a "nonimperialistic" policy of mutual investments to insulate this continent against possible economic invasion.

One of the first reactions to Hull's speech was that it answered a statement attributed to Foreign Minister Jose M. Cantilo, of Argentina, that his government would refrain from any action jeopardizing its prewar trade with European customers.

Regarding the political phases of Hull's speech, the delegates were doubtful.

The Argentine position on a trusteeship over European colonial possessions in this hemisphere was not clear.

But delegates from other nations said they believed she might balk at too sharp a resolution.

If the conference follows past procedure, it will act only by unanimous concurrence, which makes the Argentine position one of the utmost importance.

Speech Cheers London

London (Tuesday), July 23 (U.P.).—Morning newspapers today gave prominent display to Secretary of State Cordell Hull's speech in Havana and to defense developments in Washington.

"Mr. Cordell Hull Warns Against Nazis," was the Daily Telegraph's headline. Editorially the newspaper said that the significance of Hull's speech "certainly will not be misunderstood in Berlin. The arresting notice 'hands off' (the Americas) could not be more emphatic or more plainly addressed."

Other headlines were "U. S. Navy Force for Americas," in the Daily Mail; "Roosevelt Asks for 125,000,000 sterling to Save South America from Axis," in the News Chronicle, and "U. S. Backs Protection of French Isles," in the Daily Herald.

The Times gave its largest headlines of the day to the Havana conference. The newspaper said editorially that the conference "will derive additional impetus from President Roosevelt's triumph at Chicago."

Referring to Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace's remark that the Americas must cooperate in feeding Europe after the war, the Times said that the aim "is to draw the Americas closer to Europe, not to retire into some economically impracticable cuckooland of American self-sufficiency."

Petain Seeks To Keep Lands In West Indies

By the Associated Press

Berlin, July 22 (via radio).—The German radio said today the forthcoming South American trip of Camille Chautemps, former vice premier of the Petain government, would be to make secure the position of French posessions in South and Central America.

The radio attributed to diplomatic quarters in Vichy the statement that the French government is "harboring grave misgivings apropos the tendencies of the United States aiming at systematically restricting or even definitely eliminating, under strictest application of the Monroe Doctrine, European possessions in America."

"It was pointed out that such tendencies are noticeable also in connection with the Havana conference," it added. "Hence it will be Chautemps' task to counteract such tendencies as far as French possessions are concerned."

The radio quoted these sources as declaring the United States as well as England were trying to eliminate not only German but French trade in South America.

It added that diplomatic circles in Vichy were of the opinion that Chautemps would have no authority for concluding any agreements, since his journey would be primarily of an informatory character.

"Further developments are expected only after Chautemps returns, which, it is believed will approximately coincide with the conclusion of general peace in Europe," the radio asserted.

The time of Chautemps' departure was not stated. A former premier of France, he was replaced by Pierre Laval as vice premier in the Petain regime July 12.

Red Cross Alumnus Saves Family of 4 From Drowning

Richmond, Va., July 22 (AP).—The life saving course it gave 20-year-old Palmer Forbes, of Richmond, was a good investment for the Red Cross.

Young Forbes was strolling near the city wharves Saturday when he saw a boat, carrying a man and wife and two children, capsize. He plunged in and pulled them ashore one by one.

The rescued family proffered $25 as a small payment on "the debt we owe you."

"I can't take money for this," Forbes said, "give it to the Red Cross."

The grateful family promised to abide by his wishes.

Mystic 84 Means 'Too Hot to Work' In Department of Agriculture

Maximum 'Effective Temperature' Fixed For 10,000 Employes

By Edward Ryan

It wasn't the heat, it was sheer mathematics that gave some 10,000 Agriculture Department workers two early hours off yesterday.

Chiefs of the department, it was learned, have turned precise and scientific in setting up a new hot-weather policy. And the mystic number that spelled release from superheated offices was 84.

This number represented the "effective temperature"—a highly complicated and arbitrary concept that is supposed to tell with some mathematical accuracy how hot you feel. It measures the hitting power of a heat wave, and this is the first season the idea has taken hold in the Government.

The Agriculture Department, officials said, took up the theory of "effective temperature" after half a dozen conferences earlier this year with representatives of the Weather Bureau and the Public Health Service.

Signal for Dismissal

They agreed that when the effective temperature hits 84, from now on, it will be the signal for Agriculture employes to be dismissed. Operating the policy is simple—officials find out the effective temperature with a call to the Weather Bureau. They called yesterday, found the effective temperature was 83.5 and going up, and ordered employes dismissed at 2 p. m.

Although new in Government, the effective temperature concept has been floating around for more than a decade, it was learned.

Dr. Edgar Woolard, of the Weather Bureau, said that effective temperature is simply an arbitrary index to human feelings of heat and cold, taking into account heat, humidity and air movement.

This checked with the report of Thomas H. Urdahl, Washington consulting engineer, who is chairman of the committee on weather design conditions for the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers.

Effective temperature, said Urdahl, is an index of comfort.

Ill Effects Noted

The index, he said, was worked out by the society's research workers, using human "guinea pigs" to determine how various combinations of heat and humidity affected the human body. An effective temperature of 84 was found to be the maximum that office workers could endure. Their tests showed, he said, that after an hour and a half in this temperature, the office worker's pulse increased, his blood temperature went up and his usefulness dropped.

In recent years, Urdahl said, doctors and engineers have been teaming up on their research. Through their work has run this theory, that life and comfort depend on the release of heat from the body. If this release is speeded, you feel cold, if the body can't release heat, death follows. Somewhere short of the second extreme, the theory of effective temperature comes in, to show the point where the body starts losing heat too slowly for comfort.

As for the mathematics, Dr. Woolard explained that the scale of effective temperatures was set up so that, with a theoretical humidity of 100 per cent, the effective temperature would be the same as Fahrenheit temperatures. From that point down, the scale was based on the working experiments.

Policy Already in Force

Dr. Francis Reichelderfer, chief of the Weather Bureau, explained that with 50 per cent humidity, normal for Washington's hot weather, an effective temperature of 84 comes when the mercury hits 94. This fact, he explained, indicated that many Government offices, without realizing it, have been dismissing their employes in summer according to a rule-of-thumb effective temperature policy.

A normal temperature of 94 has traditionally been the signal to send employes home from nonair-conditioned Government offices. This tradition, combined with a normal Washington summer humidity of 50 per cent, has meant in practice that employes were being released in line with effective temperature theory.

Officials said that some other Government offices are believed nearly ready to take over the effective temperature policy. Agriculture's policy, it was explained, followed employe union requests for a definite heat standard that would be an automatic signal to leave work.

of uniformity in the appointment and pay of examiners, in the rules and regulations governing the examination and licensing of applicants, in the enforcement of the laws, and particularly in the control of their finances and accounts, has, in recent years, been the subject of no little criticism. . . .

"As a consequence, legislation proposed by the District Commissioners for the reorganization of the District of Columbia government provides that all of these examining boards and commissions would become advisory agencies only, and function under a single license department."

Explaining his disapproval of the second bill, President Roosevelt ointed out that it sought to authorize the furnishing of free water to charitable institutions which do not have inmates, such as boys' clubs.

"The Commissioners of the District of Columbia are opposed to the approval of this measure," the message stated, "in part because of the loss of revenue involved, but also on account of the difficulty of determining the institutions that would be entitled, and to the extent to which each would be entitled, to the free-water privilege.

mothers, and single persons on relief. One-half pint will be available to all other eligible persons.

Persons who can show a dietary need, officials said, will be able to obtain larger allotments.

The 11,400 cases which have been certified as eligible for the 5-cent milk include 6,600 direct relief cases, such as those receiving aid for dependent children, old age and needy blind pensions, and general relief; 2,800 certified on WPA and awaiting assignments, and 2,000 certified as employable by the public assistance division of the Welfare Department but unassignable to WPA employment.

The milk depots will be open from 2 to 6 p. m. daily except Sundays at the following locations:

1640 Wisconsin avenue northwest, Twenty-fifth and K streets northwest, Ninth and U streets northwest, Georgia avenue and Park road northwest, Fifth street between M and N streets northwest, 1358 Florida avenue northeast, Forty-fifth street and Sheriff road northeast, Fifth and E streets southeast, Good Hope road and Eighteenth street southeast and 476 C street northwest.

The milk sold at the depots will be of the same quality and required to meet all the requirements of other milk brought into Washington, the Surplus Marketing Administration asserted. The special price is $1.99 per 100 pounds, for which District handlers usually pay $3.17.

Agriculture Department officials pointed out, however, that the farmers will not suffer unduly by the lower price, as much of the milk sold to relief families ordinarily would be disposed of at lower prices than the standard Class 1 price and be devoted to manufacturing purposes.

Similar low-cost milk distribution is sponsored by the Federal government in Boston, Chicago and New Oleans.

Guard Makes 'Last Appeal' To Enrollees for Maneuvers

Officers of the District National Guard last night launched a "final appeal" to young men in Washington to join the Guard before it leaves for three weeks of maneuvers in northern New York State beginning August 4.

This week has been designated National Guard week in the Capital by proclamation of the District Commissioners, who have urged employers to "encourage their employes to become members of the Guard and to permit them to attend the maneuvers from August 4 to 24 without loss of time or pay."

Recruiting offices of the Guard in the Woodward Building, Fifteenth and H streets northwest, will be open all week from 9 a. m. to 10 p. m., it was announced. This evening and Thursday evening enrollees may go directly to the Armory, Pennsylvania avenue and Sixth street northwest, for examinations.

Capt. Orville E. Clark reported yesterday that up to July 15 a group of 129 men had joined the Guard, and said that the final monthly tally would reveal a good many more than that.

More than 2,000 Guardsmen from the District will be represented at the northern New York maneuvers. A special drill by the 260th Coast Artillery will be held Sunday to move equipment needed at the maneuvers. Various units are drilling at the Armory tonight and Thursday night.

Representative Hamilton Fish (Republican), New York, addressing the League of Republican Women yesterday, declared if President Roosevelt is elected for a third term the United States will promptly be involved in the European war.

Representative Fish also declared a third term would be merely the first step toward an American dictatorship and added, "I don't believe God has anointed anyone to rule over us indefinitely."

Text of Secretary Hull's Address at Inter-American Conference

Promises U. S. Aid to Resist Nazis, Fascists

Leadership, Money Available for Joint Action, Ministers Told

Following is the text of Secretary of State Hull's address yesterday to the Pan American conference in Havana:

Permit me, first of all, to express my deep personal pleasure in setting foot once more on the soil of the great nation whose guests we are at this time. Forty years have passed since my first visit to these shores, when I had the honor to serve with my regiment in the cause of Cuba's liberation. I doubly welcome the present opportunity to revisit this country—both because of the personal gratification which it affords me and because of the vital importance of the purpose which has brought us together in this beautiful City of Havana.

We are here as representatives of the 21 free and independent American republics. We meet when world conditions are perhaps graver than they have ever been before. Our purpose is to devise concrete measures by which a number of pressing problems may be met. Our objective is to safeguard the independence, the peace and the well-being of the American republics.

For nearly a year now, a new major war has raged, with increasing fury, over important areas of the earth. It came as a culmination of a process of deterioration of international conduct and international morality, extending over a period of years, during which forces of ruthless conquest were gathering strength in several parts of the world.

These forces, now at work in the world, shrink from no means of attaining their ends. In their contempt for all moral and ethical values, they are bent on uprooting the very foundation of orderly relations among nations and on subverting, undermining and destroying existing social and political institutions within nations. They have already left in their wake formerly sovereign nations with their independence trampled into dust and millions of proud men and women with their liberties destroyed.

Neutrality Does Not Guarantee Peace

Our American republics had no part in kindling the tragic conflagration which has thus been sweeping across the world. On the contrary, severally and jointly, we did everything in our power to stay its outburst. Once the conflict had begun, we did everything we could to limit its spreading. But it has been increasingly clear that in the vast tragedy which has befallen large proportions of the earth there are dangers to the American nations, as well, which it would be suicidal not to recognize in time and not to prepare to meet fully and decisively.

It has been increasingly clear that our nations must not blind themselves into fatal complacency as so many nations have done to their mortal sorrow—regarding the possibility of attack against them from without or of externally directed attempts from within to undermine their national strength and to subvert their cherished social and political institutions or both. Too many nations have only recently paid a tragic price for confidently placing reliance for their safety and security solely upon clearly expressed desire to remain at peace, upon unequivocally proclaimed neutrality, upon scrupulous avoidance of provocation. Conquerors, invaders and destroyers ignore or brush aside reasons such as these.

Looming ominously on our horizon is the danger that attempts may be made to employ against our nations, too, the dictation from abroad that have already been notoriously employed elsewhere against numerous other countries. We must recognize the serious possibility that no effort or method may be spared to achieve, with respect to some of us, economic domination and political penetration, and to sow, among our nations, the seeds of suspicion, dissension and discord—the frequent prelude to even more menacing action.

Lest our nations, too, suffer the fate that has already befallen so many other peace-loving and peace-seeking nations, wisdom and prudence require that we have in our hands adequate means of self-defense. To that end, in the face of common danger, our nations are already working together, in accordance with their firmly established practice of free consultation among equals and of voluntary cooperation with regard to problems which are of common concern to all of us. It is to examine such of these problems as are immediately pressing and to seek for them most effective solutions, that the representatives of the 21 American republics have come together at this time.

I should like to consider first the situation which confronts us in the economic sphere.

American Economic Life Threatened

The war now in progress has brought with it a disruption in the channels of international commerce and a curtailment of foreign markets for the products of the Western Hemisphere. This has meant to many American nations a diminution of foreign exchange resources and a loss of purchasing power sufficiently serious to place severe strains on their national economies. In some cases, stagnant surpluses of commodities, the exportation of which is essential to the economic life of the countries concerned, have accumulated and continue to accumulate. Their existence is a matter of present and future concern to farmers, workers, businessmen and governments throughout the continental area.

We must assume that these difficulties will continue certainly as long as the war exists. We must anticipate that these problems, and possibly others, will continue for some time after the war ends.

If the standards of living of the American peoples are to be maintained at levels already achived, and particularly if they are to be raised in accordance with the legitimate aspirations of these peoples, production and distribution must expand, not only in this hemisphere, but throughout the world. This same condition is essential to the well-being of all other areas. For no nation or group of nations can hope to become or to remain prosperous when growing poverty stalks the rest of the earth.

Under existing conditions, the problem is singularly pressing. Though war now is in progress, we must contemplate its eventual end. At that time, perhaps 80,000,000 of persons in Europe, and many millions in other parts of the world, who have entirely engaged in war work, must find a new place for themselves in the economics of peace. At the same time, it is to be assumed that, once the pressures of war are ended, there will be a general demand that reasonable conditions of life may be restored. To effect this transition, and to supply the world with what it then needs, will necessitate a great increase in production, distribution and exchange of goods. Failure to achieve this can only mean that the tragedy of war would be followed by the still greater horror of disintegration in great areas.

It is already plain that international commerce is indispensable if economic rehabilitation is to be achieved. It is also plain that the only available means of doing this is to resume, as soon as circumstances permit, the normal currents of world trade. I have no doubt that the American republics are ready and indeed anxious to do their part in bringing this about; though the extent to which we can thus play our part must depend materially on the economic methods and policies pursued by other countries.

We are confronted with two opposite trading methods. Open trade, freed as rapidly as may be practicable from the obstruction and regimentation of excessive restrictions, can accomplish the necessary task. Prosperity for the American republics or for any part of the world cannot be achieved—even the necessities of the war-torn areas of the earth cannot be met—by regimented or restricted trade, especially directed under a policy of national or regional autarchy. We recognize the need for a transition period; but we are convinced that there can be only one satisfactory permanent policy.

We have long known from experience that international trade inevitably declines in volume and usefulness when it is conducted on a basis of exclusive bilateralism, or is pressed to unfair advantage, or is used to attempt economic domination. Eventually, such methods destroy the trade and the trader alike. In the present situation, they are totally unable to provide that volume and distribution of goods which alone can save great areas from distress. Only where equal treatment, fair practices, nondiscrimination and peaceful motives lie beneath trade, can it develop to the degree needed to rehabilitate a shattered world and to provide a foundation for further economic progress.

Today, in spite of what has occurred in other parts of the world, the American nations continue to adhere to liberal trade principles and are applying them in their relations with each other as fully as the present state of affairs permits. They should be prepared to resume the conduct of trade with the entire world on this basis as rapidly as other nations are willing to do likewise.

In the meantime, the American nations must and should do everything in their power to strengthen their own economic position, to improve further the trade and other economic relations between and among themselves, and to devise and apply appropriate means of effective action to cope with the difficulties, disadvantages and dangers of the present disturbed and dislocated world conditions. To accomplish these purposes, the nations of the Western Hemisphere should undertake the fullest measure of economic cooperation, so designed and so conducted as to serve the best interests of each nation and to bring injury to none.

Progress has already been made toward the forging of new tools to carry out certain phases of economic cooperation on an inter-American basis. The Inter-American Financial and Economy Advisory Committee, which was established last November pursuant to a resolution of the Panama meeting, has proven itself to be an efficient body for considering and working out such mechanisms. It has recently created the Inter-American Development Commission to carry out the work of planning and promoting the development of new productive facilities in the American republics. In addition, it prepared the framework for the establishment of an Inter-American Bank to foster cooperation in the spheres of long-term development and of money and foreign exchange. The Government of the United States is taking steps to implement the Inter-American Bank Convention and urges that the government of the other American republics give their cooperation so that this important institution may be placed into operation as rapidly as possible.

Emergency Program For Americas

Useful as these organizations can be in the long run, there remains the immediately pressing situation confronting the American republics as a result of the curtailment and changed character of important foreign markets. Fully realizing that under present disturbed conditions no nation can expect to maintain a normal economic situation, and in order to meet the emergencies which confront their nations, the governments of the American republics, it is believed, should give consideration to the following program of immediate cooperative action:

1. Strengthening and expansion of the activities of the Inter-American Financial and Economic Advisory Committee as an instrument for continuing consultation with respect to trade matters, including especially the situation immediately confronting the American republics as a result of the curtailment and changed character of important foreign markets.

2. Creation of facilities for the temporary handling and orderly marketing of accumulated surpluses of those commodities which are of primary importance to the economic life of the American republics, whenever such action becomes necessary.

3. Development of commodity agreements with a view to assuring equitable terms of trade for both producers and consumers of the commodities concerned.

4. Consideration of methods for improving the standard of living of the peoples of the Americas, including public health measures, nutrition studies, and suitable organizations for the relief distribution of some part of any surplus commodities.

The Government of the United States of America has already utilized its existing agencies to enter into mutually advantageous cooperative arrangements with a number of American republics in connection with programs for the development of their national economics and by way of assistance to their central banks in monetary and foreign exchange matters.

It is now taking steps which will make possible the extension of both the volume and character of the operations of such agencies. When these steps have been completed, the Government of the United States of America will be in a position to expand its cooperative efforts with other American nations in the fields of long-term development and of monetary and exchange matters.

It will also be able to participate in immediate joint action with other nations of this hemisphere to meet pressing trade situations which may arise before the program outlined has come into operation.

Finally, it will be enabled to enter effectively into the cooperative program as it proceeds, assisting in the temporary handling and orderly marketing of the important commodities of the hemisphere; implementing, on its part, the commodity agreements which are developed; and carrying out other operations involving such export products.

While the proposed measures are being developed, consideration should be given to the desirability of a broader system of inter-American cooperative organization in trade matters to complement inter-American cooperative organizations in the field of long-term economic development and of money and foreign exchange.

By helping each other, by carrying out with vigor, determination and loyalty whatever decisions are reached, the American nations can build a system of economic defense that will enable each of them to safeguard itself from the dangers of economic subordination from abroad and of economic distress at home. It is no part of our thought to obstruct in any way logical and natural trade with Europe or with any other portion of the world, but rather to promote such trade with nations willing to meet us, in good faith, in a spirit of friendly and peaceful purpose, and on a plane of frank and fair dealing. Against any other kind of dealing, we naturally will protect ourselves.

Hits at Fifth Column, Espionage Activities

The solution of our economic problems alone is not enough to preserve the peace and security of this nemisphere. There exist also other problems, which are of an altogether different character but the solution of which is of no less importance to our freedom and independence.

I refer to the threat to our security arising from activities directed from without the hemisphere but which operate within our respective borders. A new and evil technique has been invented which seeks by devious methods to corrupt the body politic in order to subject it to alien purposes. With cynical effrontery, sanctuary within the generous citadels of free speech and freedom of assembly is demanded by agents whose masters would obliterate those institutions and foment instead dissension, prejudice, fear, and hatred.

Make no mistake concerning the purposes of this sinister campaign. It is an attempt to acquire domination of the American Republics by foreign governments in their own interest. Already we have seen the tragic results abroad when governmental structures have been undermined and the fabric of established institutions riddled by the termites of alien propaganda.

We long ago recognized the source and extent of this infection and have already taken some steps to eradicate it. As I have declared that it was incompatible with the sovereignty of any American Republic that persons or [illegible] within our countries should be controlled by any outside government for its own purposes. It is now urgently incumbent upon us to take decisive remedial action to the end that the independence and political integrity of each of the American Republics may be fully safeguarded.

To this no friendly government can legitimately object. The inter-American system carries no implication of aggression and no threat to any nation. It is based solely on a policy of self-defense, designed to preserve the independence and the integrity of each of the American nations. It implies no hegemony on the part of any member of the inter-American group; but it equally rejects the thesis of hegemony by anyone else. It resembles in no way regional policies recently pursued in other parts of the world, which pretend to invoke our inter-American system as precedent. The difference is that our sole purpose is self-defense, while these other policies seem instead to be pretexts for conquest by the sword, for military occupation and for complete economic and political domination of other free and independent peoples.

There are other pressing political problems arising out of the vast changes which have taken place on the continent of Europe. The principles on which we act with respect to these problems have been forged by the American republics through years of discussion and practice. They are applied entirely without discrimination, solely for the purpose of assuring that the security of the American Hemisphere shall not be impaired by the repercussions of warfare elsewhere.

Specifically, there is before us the problem of the status of European possessions in this hemisphere. These geographic regions have not heretofore constituted a menace to the peace of the Americas; their administrations were established, for the most part, many generations ago and, in our time, have acted as congenial neighbors. We have no desire to absorb these possessions or to extend our sovereignty over them, or to include them in any form of sphere of influence.

We could not, however, permit these regions to become a subject of barter in the settlement of European differences, or a battleground for the adjustment of such differences. Either situation could only be regarded as a threat to the peace and safety of this hemisphere, as would any indication that they might be used to promote systems aline to the inter-American system. Any effort, therefore, to modify the existing status of these areas—whether by cession, by transfer, or by any impairment whatsoever in the control heretofore exercised—would be of profound and immediate concern to all the American republics.

It is accordingly essential that we consider a joint approach to this common problem. We must be in a position to move rapidly and without hesitation.

Collective Trusteeship Over Western Hemisphere

It has been suggested that our action take the form of the establishment of a collective trusteeship, to be exercised in the name of all of the American republics. The Government of the United States indorses this suggestion and is prepared to cooperate, should occasion arise, in its execution.

The establishment of a collective trusteeship for any region must not carry with it any thought of the creation of a special interest by any American republic. The purpose of a collective trusteeship must be to further the interests and security of all of the American nations, as well as the interest of the region in question. Moreover, as soon as conditions permit, the region should be restored to its original sovereign or be declared independent when able to establish and maintain stable self-government.

Seldom has a meeting of friendly nations opened in an atmosphere of more widespread misconception and more flagrant misrepresentation as to its aims and purposes than have emanated in recent weeks, from responsible and irresponsible quarters, in connection with this meeting.

We have met to consult together regarding our own pressing problems. We covet nothing anywhere in the world. We are free from the spirit of enmity toward any nation. But we cannot fail to be acutely conscious of the dangers which confront us as a result of present world conditions and against which we are taking and intend to take fully adequate measures of defense. National life itself today imposes as an absolute obligation the will to national defense, should national institutions or integrity ever be threatened. Achievement of this requires that we call out anew the endless energy, the complete spirit of sacrifice, the iron will, which characterized the pioneers, the liberators and the defenders to whom we owe our present freedom. Let no man say in the world of today any nation not willing to defend itself is safe. The fortitude and resolution of our forefathers won for us our free institutions. We proudly have inherited them, and proudly are prepared to maintain them.

At the same time, while meeting the imperative needs of emergency conditions, we must—and, I am certain, we will—continue our abiding faith that what is happening today is but a temporary interruption in the progress of civilization. Mankind can advance only when human freedom is secure; when the right of self-government is safeguarded; when all nations recognize each other's right to conduct its internal affairs free from outside interference; when there exist among nations respect for the pledged word, determination to abstain from the use of armed force in pursuit of policy, and willingness to settle controversies by none but peaceful means; when international economic relations are based upon mutual benefit, equality of treatment and fair dealing.

U. S. Made Peace Plea in 1937

In 1937, in an attempt to prevent the impending catastrophe of a new war, the Government of the United States addressed a communication to all nations, reciting these basic principles of orderly international relations under the rule of law as the foundation of its foreign policy and inviting comment thereon. More than 50 nations expressed on that occasion their belief in the validity of these principles. At Montevideo, at Buenos Aires, at Lima, at Panama, the 21 American republics proclaimed their acceptance.

I am confident that, sooner or later, the entire world must return to a system of international relations based on those principles. They are the only possible foundation stones of an organized society assured of enduring peace and sustained prosperity. The price of their abandonment is the chaos of international anarchy and the inexorable impoverishment of nations and individuals, such as we witness today in Europe and in Asia.

In a system of cooperative peace such as we envisage there is no exclusion. Its underlying principles are universal in their applicability; they can be accepted by all nations to the benefit of each and all; they must be accepted by all, if the light of modern civilization is not to be extinguished. Any nation which in good faith accepts and practices them automatically shares in the vast benefits they confer.

At this time, when these principles and these ideals are being widely challenged, when institutions based on them are being crushed by force over large areas of the world, it is doubly essential that our nations keep them alive and rededicate themselves to the cause of their preservation.

It is in this spirit, and in this spirit alone, that the Government which I have the honor to represent approaches the tasks that are before our present meeting—in complete confidence that in this vital respect all of the American nations stand today as united as ever.

Vocational Training for Defense Workers Begins in D. C. Schools

Courses Start Today; Enrollment of 600 Seen by End of Week

School starts at 8 a. m. today for men wanting to learn vocational trades vital to American defense and before the week ends the number enrolled probably will reach 600.

This enrollment was predicted late yesterday by L. J. Cantrell, assistant superintendent of schools, after the District Employment Center and the WPA had sent a small number of men, unemployed in the main, to the two high schools and three vocational schools for registration.

The authorities place no educational requirements on the applicants, asking only that they be "good Americans" and willing to take the offered trade courses.

About five, mostly between 19 and 20 years of age, turned up at the Abbott Vocational School yesterday and met Instructor J. P. Lee. His course in electrical study begins today. More than 15 enrolled at Abbott before the close of the day.

McKinley High School drew slightly more than 15 enrollments. It opens courses in machine shop, automobile shop and mechanical drawing today. The greatest enrollment of the day was at Armstrong High School, where more than 50 registered. This school will afford courses in metal work and automobile mechanics, principally. At midday, Phelps Vocational School reported some 25 registrations. Chamberlain Vocational School registration was slow.

Many persons simply sought information on the courses. Many were handicapped by having to work during the school hours. The schedules are five days a week, between 8 a. m. and 4 p. m. The course extends over six weeks.

Instructors said yesterday that it is not expected to turn out first-rate electricians, automobile mechanics and other highly skilled workmen in six weeks, but they could be given a helpful introduction to the trades.

Draft Bill Has Senate Unit Favor

8,000 a month through March. Four hundred thousand more would be called in April, smaller numbers during the summer, and 600,000 the following October.

Report Expected in Week

Chairman Sheppard said the committee expected to report a conscription bill sometime this week. He said he favored passage of such legislation and predicted the committee and Congress would give it overwhelming support.

The ranking minority member, Senator Austin, of Vermont, was out of the city, but his office declared he would support compulsory military service.

Senator Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, said he would vote for the measure reserving the right to present amendments on the floor.

"I'm absolutely confident we must have some form of compulsory enlistment to get the men required for the Army," he declared.

Minton Favors Bill

Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, said his vote would depend on the amendments made to the bill. He said he didn't like the measure "as it now stands, but is not against its theory"

Senator Minton (Democrat), of Indiana, said he would vote for "whatever the Army feels is necessary to get the trained men required for the new arms program" and that he believed the committee and Congress favored some form of compulsory service.

"I'm still listening," said Senator Johnson (Democrat), of Colorado. "I haven't made up my mind about the present bill, but will probably favor it with some limitations."

Senator Downey (Democrat), of California, declared he was "very reluctant" to vote for conscription, but if "proper safeguards" are added to the pending legislation, he would probably approve it. He predicted early passage.

"It is quite necessary to pass such a bill to get the men required for the Army," said Senator Gurney. "I'll support the bill the Army wants, provided it is applied to all classes and not just to the poor man's son.

"There will be almost unanimous approval of it in committee."

Senator Lee (Democrat), of Oklahoma, who is an author of legislation to draft capital in time of war, said in a statement he favored a universal selective draft as the "best method of raising an Army" and a draft of capital as the "best method of financing a war."

Of the committeemen out of the city, colleagues said two Democratic Senators, Hill, of Alabama, and Schwartz, of Wyoming, had indicated their support of compulsory military service in principle, and that Senator Thomas (Republican), of Idaho, who took the seat of the late Senator Borah, had expressed opposition.

Other defense developments yesterday were:

Secretary of the Navy Knox appeared behind closed doors of the House Appropriations Committee yesterday to urge approval of an $936,000,000 for the Navy, part of which would be used to begin construction of a "two-ocean Navy."

The Army announced that 400 Ordnance Reserve officers were being ordered to active duty at their own request to help accelerate the arms program, and that 357 Regular Army Ordnance officers are being replaced by retired and reserve officers on college ROTC assignments.

Chairman May of the House Military Affairs Committee, called Mayor LaGuardia of New York to testify tomorrow on the Burke-Wadsworth conscription bill. Army officials, headed by Secretary Stimson, will be heard Thursday and opponents of the bill, Friday he said.

The Navy announced the purchase of two 15,000-ton Grace liners, the Santa Maria and Santa Barbara, at $1,300,000 each, for auxiliaries. The purchase brought to five the number of merchant ships recently bought by the Navy, some of which will be used as transports.

Sidelights of the War

Hitler Gives Armored Train to Duce Whose Life 'Is Precious Not Only to Italy but to Germany'

By the Associated Press

Rome, July 22.—Premier Mussolini received an armored train from Adolf Hitler today, intended to protect Il Duce against air attacks during his travels.

The train, consisting of two cars with German crews, was presented by Gen. Ritter von Pohl in a formal ceremony during which Il Duce watched its guns shoot at air targets.

Gen. von Pohl told Mussolini that Hitler wished for it to protect "your life which is precious not only to the Italian people, but also to the German nation."

Mussolini thanked him "for this gift, which is another sign of the unbreakable brotherhood of arms which unites great Germany and Italy in peace and in war."

Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering joined the Fuehrer in making the gift.

The train's 16 anti-aircraft guns—arranged in four batteries, two on each car—smashed a dummy airplane floating a few yards above the seacoast, then shot shrapnel into the sky while Mussolini watched from a special stand.

Quip on Hitler Platz In London Panics Nazis

A clown runs into the ring lugging a huge suitcase. Another asks him where he's going.

"I'm going to Adolf Hitler Platz," No. 1 replies.

"Why all that bagagge just to go to Adolf Hitler Platz?" asks No. 2.

"Oh, I mean Adolf Hitler Platz in London."

Of course, it "brings down the house."

British Tie Tin Can On Use of Tin Can

London, July 22 (AP).—Britain is bidding adieu to the tin can.

Under an order issued today by Supply Minister Herbert Morrison face powders, shaving sticks, soups, fruits, cigarettes and tobacco may no longer be put up in tin containers.

The British hope to save 40,000 to 50,000 tons of tin annually for armament production. Paper containers will be more widely used when feasible.

Canadian Gnashing Gums, Law Holds Up Store Teeth

Vancouver, British Columbia, July 22 (AP).—A loyal Canadian mumbled today his hopes for a short war as he wondered how long he could hold out on soup.

He is in Canada—his teeth in the United States—and the chances of reunion, he thinks, are pretty slim.

It happened like this. The man sent his false teeth to the United States for a repair job shortly before the monetary restrictions were applied.

Now he is unable to send money across the border to pay for the overhaul, and the dental firm can't see its way to return the teeth free.

Americans in Britain Forming Armed Units

London (Tuesday), July 23 (AP).—Americans living in Britain have formed heavily-armed units at their own expense to help resist invasion, the Daily Mail said today.

"They are being trained by Scots guards and are to form a special mobile reserve to go to any point in the defense when the need arises," the paper said.

Nazi Raids on Britain Fiercest Ever

By International News Service

London (Tuesday), July 23.—Squadrons of German bombing planes ranged from one end of the British Isles to the other early today dropping hundreds of high explosive and incendiary bombs in the most savage series of air raids yet experienced.

More than 100 incendiary bombs were dropped in one southeast Scottish town before Royal Air Force fighters could drive off the Nazi planes. Several fires were started, one in a crowded tenement building.

Starting shortly before midnight, the German raiders attacked areas in Wales, southeastern and northeastern Scotland and southwestern and southeastern England.

Residents of a town in southwest England witnessed one of the most spectacular aerial battles of the war. Awakened in the early morning hours by the deafening roar of a terrific anti-aircraft barrage, they watched Nazi bombers soar through a sky brilliantly lighted by searchlights and the glare of bursting shells.

A town in northeastern England was visited twice by the raiders, it was reported. Eight bombs, in all, were dropped but without serious damage.

These bombings followed an announcement by the air ministry last night that French pilots took part in heavy counter-blows at German military bases and industrial areas.

Aerial raids, extending into Danish waters, were concentrated on German shipping, airdromes, oil supplies and factories.

One German supply ship, a vessel of about 14,000 tons, was bombed and probably sunk off the Danish Coast. Oil tanks were set afire at Ghent, Belgium, and Nazi airdromes bombed in France, Belgium and Germany. Factories at Wismar, Rothenburg and Kassel as well as barge concentrations on the Weser Canal were other targets.

Two Killed in Scotland

The air ministry issued its communique at the end of a day in which German bombers ranged over English and Scottish areas in an intensified aerial warfare which took at least two lives. Both victims were killed in a raid on a town in southeast Scotland.

One German bomber was shot down by British fighting planes.

At the same time, the British admiralty admitted the loss of the destroyer Brazen, sunk while in tow after having been damaged by Nazi bombers. No lives were lost. Before the 1,360-ton destroyer was put out of action, she accounted for three German aircraft, the admiralty claimed. The Brazen was the twenty-seventh destroyer lost since the outbreak of the war.

Another destroyer, the Beagle, shot down a Junkers bomber in another engagement, bringing the toll of Nazi aircraft to five.

British losses in repelling German raids and in battering German areas totaled six planes, it was announced. Two fighters were lost and four bombers.

Gen. Charles De Gaulle, commander of the French troops who refused to recognize Marshall Petain's armistice, announced that French pilots had joined in British bombing planes.

While he gave no details as to where they fought, or whether they were in French or British planes, he claimed all returned safetly despite heavy German antiaircraft fire.

It was revealed today that the Germans are attempting to decoy British fighter planes by using old bombers as bait while the newer Nazi machines sneak overhead to their targets. In all cases, it was claimed, the ruse failed to work.

While the admiralty announced that mine fields had been laid in the southern entrance to the Irish Sea and Bristol Channel, closing that area to invasion, Britain surveyed defenses made much stronger by a public working bee over the week-end.

Women and children joined troops and civilian defense workers in erecting sandbagged and concrete machine-gun emplacements, barricades and barbed wire entanglements.

London, July 22 (AP).—The authoritative Press Association today reported that British defense forces and fighter planes had shot down more than 2,530 German planes since start of the war—an average of 8 planes a day.

The air ministry reported that from a German Messerschmitt-110 shot down in the Channel it was established that the Germans were using these powerful planes as bomb carriers for the first time.

The Messerschmitt-110 is a long-range fighter with exceptional speed developed by two powerful motors. Experts believe the use of these fast planes, as bombers is an experiment, since they offer a smaller target for antiaircraft batteries and can be handled more easily in maneuvers than the big bombers.

Mr. Coburn Holds Drama's Summer Banner High!

His Mohawk Festival Is Theater at Its Best; RKO-Keith Theater Closed, Pending Premiere; This, That and the Other About the Theater

THE FIRST ISSUE of the Mohawk Drama Festival Magazine to reach this desk this season corroborates a fixed earlier conviction that here, on the campus of Union College, at Schenectady, N. Y., is the most representative "summer theater" in these United States.

BELL

Under the guidance of that distinguished stage and screen actor-author-director-producer, Charles Coburn, the Mohawk Drama Festival renders the theater an inestimable service. It provides a tremendously effective force in the drilling of new players for the legitimate theater, gives between-seasons outlet to the talents of some of the theater's most distinguished stars and attracts huge audiences from all parts of the United States.

The scholastic activities, conducted as a corollary of the production of work essential to the fulfillment of the highest aims of the living drama. Mr. Coburn is Catholic in his choice of actors and actresses to appear in his productions. They are drawn from both stage and screen and, during a summer, compile a notable roster,

Among those associated with Mr. Coburn this year in his season of seven plays are such artists as Beulah Bondi, who opened the summer cycle on July 16, in "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch;" Cornelia Otis Skinner, currently appearing in S. N. Behrman's "Biography," Dennis King, Sally Eilers, Jean Muir and numerous others.

It is this sort of summertime atheneum that Washington always has hoped would spring up and flourish somewhere in these environs. There have, from time to time, been what seemed to be promising starts, but somehow they never amounted to more than that. Sometime, perhaps, somebody will start something hereabouts that he will be able to finish successfully—as Mr. Coburn has done up New York State way. Hasten the day!

Down at Abingdon, Va., Robert Porterfield has done pretty well with his Barter Theater, that unique institution where a sack of potatoes or a side of pork will buy admission to his operas. Mr. Porterfield now has in preparation a new play by Edward Boykin, based on a subject close to the Virginian's heart. It is a biographical drama bearing the title of "Lee of Virginia," scheduled to open this Thursday. After a three-day run in Abingdon, it will be taken "on the road" for a brief tour.

Before enthusiasm over "All This and Heaven Too" begins to wane, it might as well be set down that this is only the eleventh picture in the history of the Earle Theater to be accorded an extended run. This covers the span of a decade. For years no films were "held over" at the Earle. The other ten that have been, are "Robin Hood," "You Can't Take It With You," "Dodge City," "Dark Victory," Juarez," "Daughters Courageous," "The Old Maid." "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," "The Private Lives of Elizabeth and Essex" and "The Fighting 69th." It is an eloquent tribute to her standing as "First Lady of the cinema" that Bette Davis has appeared in five of the 11 extended-run features.

In case the matter has not yet come to your attention, RKO-Keith's Theater will be closed all day today, preparatory to the world premiere tonight at 8:30 of "The Ramparts We Watch." After a day of idleness, doors will be opened at 7:30 p. m., for the invitational audience that will view the first presentation on any screen of the first feature-length film ever made by the editors of Time and Life, producers of "The March of Time." The regular run will begin tomorrow morning, on the usual house policy of continuous performances at the regular scale of prices, no seats reserved.

Raymond Massey, Olivia de Havilland and Dennis Morgan are announced by the Warner Brothers for major roles in "Santa Fe Trail," starring Errol Flynn. The star of "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" will be seen as John Brown, of Harpers Ferry fame, and Morgan as Gen. George Custer, who made his last stand at the Little Big Horn. Miss De Havilland will be the beloved of Mr. Flynn, serving in that capacity before the cameras for the sixth time. She will be seen on the Earle screen next week, by the way, in "My Love Came Back," opposite Jeffrey Lynn.

Reverting briefly to the local summer theater, "The Skull," entering its second week at the Cross Roads Theater, over in ol' Virginny, is breaking all of the hayloft's previous attendance records.

You-Never-Can-Tell Note

And they thought they were butting their "Skull"' against a stone wall!

In Hollywood

By Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, July 22.

Watched Bill Seiter direct a love scene between Roz Russell and Brian Aherne for "Hired Wife," but they were so bogged down by buttermilk—they'd used up eight quarts during the scene—that very little fire came through the film. Seiter, who's making some of our best comedies, has an uncanny sixth sense about a funny line. After all, it was Bill who turned Irene Dunne comedienne in "Roberta," took Binnie Barnes from heavies, made Kay Francis over in "It's a Date." Bill says one shouldn't try directing Bob Benchley, because having him in a picture is just like putting three puppy dogs or a baby into a scene. You don't look at anything else. Roz says, "Even if you're in the scene with him you're so busy watching Bob you don't even know if your own hat's on straight."

Warners' newcomer, Joan Bredell, who did the naive ingenue in "Winter Carnival," will have to change her good old Irish name because it's too much like Joan Blondell.

Gale Sondergaard has turned in another 22-karat performance as Mrs. Hammond, the Eurasian woman, in "The Letter." How that gal troups!

Spencer Tracy, talking to Composer Franz Waxman, a brand-new father, said "You're looking a little shopworn lately, Franz." "Getting no sleep," said Franz. "Son-rise at our house is 5:30 these mornings."

I hear the smartest New York ladies have a serious complaint. Their men are at Plattsburg, N. Y., training, but there's very little equipment for sports, so the boys took their own. They have a bartender from the Racquet Club, their yachts in the harbor, and chauffeurs are training side by side with their masters.

Maybe Jimmy Stewart and Olivia deHavilland aren't going to be married. But sister Joan Fontaine just bought beautiful flat silver for Olivia. Guess the girls just exchange those presents as week-end gifts, huh?

One of the boys in Warner's publicity department called what he thought was Ann Sheridan's number the other day. "Wrong number," answered a man. "Isn't this Sunset so-and-so?" "Yes." "Well, Ann Sheridan used to live there." "I wish she still did."

When Paramount started dragging out old pictures like "Love Me Tonight," with Jeanette MacDonald, Maurice Chevalier and Myrna Loy, which was made in 1932, they really had a far-seeing scheme in mind. They're not only releasing it with major pictures, which audiences are lapping up, but they're preparing for television. And when that hits they'll have the only motion picture library of short subjects already made, tried and approved—not once, but twice. Other pictures they're showing are "Design for Living," "Lives of a Bengal Lancer" and "Night After Night"—in which George Raft introduced Mae West to a palpitating public.

Never Mind That, Girls, Sound Your 'A'!

EDDIE ALBERT, OLIVIA DE HAVILLAND AND JANE WYMAN

in a scene which one suspects is of comic import—look at Mr. Albert's eyebrows—in "My Love Came Back," the screen attraction opening Friday at the Earle. Miss de Havilland shares costellar honors with Jeffrey Lynn in this Warner Brothers subject

Edgar Wallace's 'The Frog' Hops Into Roadside

American Premiere of Mystery Writer's Tale Offered by Barn Group

By Richard L. Coe

Did "The Frog" croak last night in the red barn theater on the Rockville Pike? Second act leave-takings at the first American performance of the Edgar Wallace thriller by the Roadside Theater make it difficult to report everything "The Frog" did, but there was one thing he didn't do. "The Frog" did not lay an egg.

With which Variety euphuism we report that the late mystery master was in well-snarled form when he wrote "The Fellowship of the Frog," from which Ian Hay constructed this adaption, a what's-all-the-shootin' fer? that had a year's run in London, A. D. 1937. At first, this new Roadside offering goes in for a lot of gradual exposition, a pack of which seems pretty childish for our Dreadful Decade, but with accomplished facility, prolific Edgar enmeshed cast, audience and set designer in such a skein of possibilities that, between the acts, betting seemed like Preakness Day at Pimlico with an open field.

So it's 1937 and all London is aghast at the slimy activities of "The Frog." No one knows who he is, but he hops about tirelessly, turning up all sorts of folk who might well be "The Frog." Described as a sort of Anglicized "mutual protection organizatoin," his loosely knit group is identified by marks of a frog on the wrist, much cloudy business and personal numbers, which, like D. C. auto tags, mean more the smaller they are.

A bomb gets planted in Scotland Yard and blows the scenery to bits. A sharp-spoken fuehrer escapes into a miraculous fireplace. The sinister rites of induction into the brotherhood proceed the general involvement. Some enviable radio miming gives definite clew for a fascinating houseful of guests. For comic relief, there's a red-nosed cherub with a wife and baby. And there's a welcome restraint in the use of "cockney," a major matter which can put no end of irritation to the mysterious ways of the British pre-1939 style.

Kenn Romney Scores

This shift to the near present in Roadside tactics is nicely accomplished by the group, with special attention and a gold encrusted cowbell to set designer Don Jones, the man who managed to squeeze 13 scenes onto the Roadside crow's nest, several of which are asterpieces of look-out-toos-that- wall's-gonna-fall-down sort of thing.

Another matter that's worth cheering for in this back-to-the-days-before-the-war effort is the casting of Kenn Romney in a role worthy of that wicked actor. Not since his foolery in "The Tavern" has wry-voiced Romney had such a juicy part, and he does a lot with it.

William Zuckert and Maccubbin Waters are the hard-working men of S. Yard, and mercifully theirs is plain English with no striving for a phony accent. Edna Evans is charming as a young modern after an earlier appearance this season in another era of time. Other Roadsiders involved include A. Alan Fischler, Joseph Whiteford, Herbert Lupton, Peter Bedford, Ted Projector, Jean Miller, Alice Gartrell, Ray Schreiner, Paul J. Sears, Tosca Fattorini, William Hutterly and Sydney W. Hay. Ralph S. Fowler directed with an eye on keeping the guessers popeyed. Popeyed they are.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, July 22.

SINCLAIR LEWIS prepared to write a series of articles about spiritualism, by visiting the establishment of a spiritualist whose advertisement he had seen. Lewis met the medium and confessed that he was somewhat of a writer, interested in contacting the spirits of two other writers who bore very common names—William and Henry . . . The medium forthwith produced the spirits of the two departed writers, Henry and William—the latter so friendly that he spoke of himself as "Bill" . . . Lewis listened to their messages, and when the seance was over, he thanked the medium. "By the way," was his parting word, "Henry was all right—that was Henry James. But I never knew that William called himself 'Bill.' I wonder how that must have sounded in those days—'Bill' Shakespeare . . ."

WALTER WINCHELL woke up early enough to fulfill a supper date with George Jean Nathan last week . . . Winchell, who never will be memorialized as having been the Twentieth-Century Sphinx, was asked how he enjoyed the supper. "Was Nathan at all interesting?" Walter was asked . . . "As a matter of fact, he was extremely interesting," Winchell assured. "Yes, George was very interesting . . . He let me do all the talking."

HARRY RUBY, the songwriter now vacationing in New York, has been enjoying himself so much—by seeing all the baseball games, and holding reunion with his colleagues—that he sent his wife back to Hollywood this week, with instructions to sell the home in which they have been living for so many years. "I want us to be free to pick up and go wherever and whenever we feel like it," Ruby explained to his wife. "I don't want us to have to have to remain set, just because we own the place" . . . "How much shall I ask for the house?" asked Mrs. Ruby . . . "Well," her husband told her, "just bring back twenty bucks—and a hunk of the gold anchor which kept me in Hollywood."

THIS IS A STORY which soon will have Washington repercussions. It involves one of the prosecutors here, who had employed a private wire-tapper in some special investigation work he had been doing . . . Two years ago charges against that wire-tapper were presented to the prosecutor. The defendant was represented by able counsel. Prosecution was postponed . . . A few days ago the U. S. Senate's wire-tapping committee grabbed some of the documents concerning this case, and is preparing to break the story this week . . . In the meantime, however, the prosecutor also is busy. Witnesses are being subpenaed and he will take action within a few days.

CHARLES WASHBURN, the press agent now touring with the Al Jolson show, garnered a great deal of space throughout the country with the news story concerning Jolson's injuries to himself last week . . . The last show which Washburn press-agented on tour was the short-lived play, "The Man Who Killed Lincoln." The play didn't last long enough for Washburn to pull the stunt for which he had made all arrangements—a stunt whereby members of a hastily formed association of Lincoln admirers were to kidnap Richard Waring, the actor who portrayed the role of Edwin Booth.

MRS. JIM FARLEY expressed genuine relief, when her husband—who emerged as the most popular man at the convention—failed to get the nomination for President . . . Mrs. Farley never has aspired to become a tenant at the White House, for she'd rather see her husband free of such tremendous responsibilities. Last December, when a New York cab-driver recognized her, and said: "I hope I'm driving the future First Lady," she said: "From the bottom of my heart—I want no part of it." And in March, when a ringsider at Fefe's Monte Carlo told her: "I'm campaigning for Jim, because I'm such a good friend of yours, and I'd like to be able to get into the White House." Mrs. Farley replied: "If you're such a god friend of mine, you'd do your best to keep me out of there."

CLYDE PANGBORN, who has accepted a commission in the Canadian Air Force, did not relinquish his American citizenship by such a step. Pangborn's enlistment was a special one—in which he did not have to vow allegiance to the crown . . . Frank Sullivan has taken the plunge, and will become a playwright—collaborating with Russel Crouse . . . Maxie Rosenbloom is discontinuing his radio work and will return this week to Hollywood—where his film salary has been increased five-fold . . . Giovanni Martinelli isn't planning to return to Italy for quite some time. His son has enrolled as a student at M. I. T. .

Ex-Navy Men

One of the first persons Paul Whiteman met when he arrived for "Strike Up the Band" was Sandy Roth, veteran assistant director. They served in the Navy during the World War, both enlisting from San Francisco in 1917.

Louella O. Parsons

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, July 22 (INS).—Pardon me if I say I told you so and call Jack Warner on the carpet for a little public call down. He has given his blessing to Bette Davis and told her that she has his permission to star in the "The Little Foxes," for Samuel Goldwyn. I printed some six months ago that Sam was literally moving heaven and earth to get Bette to play the role that Tallulah Bankhead created on the stage. Jack sent me a wire from New York that was pages long and told me in no uncertain terms what he thought of me for printing such a story.

LOUELLA O. PARSONS

So last week, when Bette confided to her friends that Jack had finally told her he had no objections to her bringing the Lillian Hellman play to the screen, I decided to remind Jack of that telegram. Bette makes her three for Warners according to her contract. "The Little Foxes" is an outside deal and William Wyler, who is one of Bette's favorite megaphoners, will direct. He is under contract to Goldwyn.

Joan Fontaine, who says she knew nothing of being signed for "Back Street," until she read it in my column, hasn't made up her mind to make the picture. She was signed by David Selznick and she says if she doesn't report at Universal, she will have to go on suspension. Said Joan, "rather than make a picture that I feel isn't right for me, I would go on suspension. I am not saying I won't do 'Back Street,' I haven't even read the script yet, but I would like to follow 'Rebecca' with a story that is worthy of that picture."

I can hardly believe Dickie Jones is 13. Seems only yesterday that he was knee high to a grasshopper. He was on the radio with me, and he wasn't more than six. Well, anyway, Dickie had his motion picture contract approved in Judge Emmett Wilson's court on Thursday. Harry Sokolow represented young Mr. Jones, who has signed a contract with Frank Lloyd.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Kay Stewart announced her engagement to Bill Proctor at a luncheon at the Uplifters. He is a member of the famed Proctor and Gamble soap family; Benny Baker's bride has gone to New York to try for a reconciliation; the Ilona Massey-Alan Curtis announcement will be made as soon as he is legally free; Mary Beth Hughes and Tex Harris dining tete-a-tete at the Bel Air Country Club; Brenda Marshall and Bill Holden receiving congratulations from many of the House of Murphy diners.

Olympe Bradna, the Paramount cutie, and Clayton Moore, a La Conga twosome; Mrs. Jack Warner and her daughter Joy leave for Tahiti Tuesday. Jack and Elsa Maxwell will join them in Honolulu early in August; John Shelton has been spending these summer eves with Martha O'Driscoll; Lona Andre and Seymour Chotler, local attorney, a la Congaing; Nat Pendleton has been officially informed that his brother, who has made France his home for many years, is safe.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Moscow Proclaims Itself Capital of 'New' World

INDEPENDENCE GONE—The flag at the Latvian legation, 1715 Twenty-second street northwest, was at halfstaff yesterday in mourning for the forfeiture of the little nation's 22 years' independence to Russia. But Dr. Alfred Bilmanis has refused to surrender the legation

Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia Begin Nationalization of Land and Wealth; 25 Million Annexed Since Start of War

By Otto D. Tolischus.

Stockholm, July 22.—Having decided to join Russia and having been assured by the Russian commissars that there was no obstacle to this and that, in fact, they may already consider themselves members of the Soviet Union, the three Baltic states—Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia—proceeded today to introduce the Soviet regime as rapidly as possible.

Therewith, some 25,000,000 people including those annexed from Finland, Poland and Rumania, have come under the sway of the Bolshevists since the beginning of the war. Bolshevist elation over this success was expressed by Commissar Vishinsky during the Riga demonstration last night when he declared that the entire capitalist world was surely going to its destruction to the benefit of all mankind, while Moscow, in its international broadcasts, proclaimed itself today the capital of the New World.

Sovietization Proceeding

Sovietization of the Baltics is proceeding in all three states according the same time table and the same plan that apparently has been worked out in Moscow.

Parliaments of the three states today day considered a program for nationalization of land, banks and industries. The program was, more or less, the same for all three countries.

As decided on by the Lithuanian and Latvian parliaments today and outlined in bills before the Estonian Parliament, it was further explained by their respective agricultural ministers in parliamentary speeches that all the land and waterways of the three countries is to be nationalized immediately. Whoever possess no more than 30 hectares, and works them himself, may keep them, together with all livestock and equipment. All farms and estates larger than this go into the landfond from which land is to be allotted to landless peasants and agricultural laborers. All tax and other debts owed by small peasants are to be annulled.

Keeps Legation in Argentina

Buenos Aires, July 21 (AP).—Latvian inister Peter Olins gave formal notice to the Argentine foreign office today that he would refuse to surrender the legation to new authorities appointed by the present Communist government.

Halifax Rejects Hitler Peace Bid as Having No Foundation in Justice

watched with "growing detestation" and that the people of the United States were praying for Britain's victory "over this wicked man and his ways."

"The people of the United States . . . have judged his narrow, twisted vision and they see that his gospel is the gospel of hate, his policy the policy of brute force and his message to mankind the enthralment of the human spirit under ruthless tyranny."

No Suggestion of Justice

In rejecting Hitler's speech giving Britain the choice of capitulation or horrible destruction, Lord Halifax said:

"There was in his speech no suggestion that peace must be based on justice, and no word of recognition that other nations of Europe had any right to the self-determination principle which he has so often invoked for the Germans.

"His only appeal was to the base instinct of fear and his only arguments were threats.

"Quite plainly, unless the greater part of the world has entirely misread his speech, his picture of Europe is one of Germany lording it over these people whom he has deprived of freedom . . . we remain unmoved by threats."

Lord Halifax spoke gravely of Hitler's threat that unless Britain submits to his military might he will destroy not only the British Isles, but the British Empire.

"In every part of Britain . . . there is only one spirit, a spirit of indomitable resolution," he said.

He admitted that "this struggle may cost us everything" but that "the peoples of the British Commonwealth, along with those who love truth, justice and freedom, will never accept this new world of Hitler's."

"Hitler may plant the swastika where he will, but unless he can sap the strength of Britain the foundations of his empire are built on sand.

"In their hearts the people that he has beaten down curse him and pray that his attacks may be broken on the defenses of our island fortress. They long for the day when we shall sally forth and return blow for blow.

"We shall assuredly not disappoint them.

"Then will come the day of final reckoning when Hitler's mad plans for Europe will be shattered by the unconquerable passion of man for freedom."

He called upon the British people to pray "because we know that we are trying to resist things which cannot be according to God's will" and concluded:

"We shall go forward seeing clearly both the splendor and the perils of the task, but strengthened by faith, through which with God's help as we try to do His service we shall prevail."

Earlier in the day Britain's rejection of Hitler's peace offer was indicated when Minister of Labor Ernest Bevin called on arms factory workers to keep up top-speed production "to get this wretched job over with on our terms."

Prime Minister Churchill will give a more detailed answer to Hitler before the House of Commons Tuesday.

Lord Halifax dealt directly with Hitler's Reichstag speech, saying to his radio audience:

"Many of you will have read two days ago the speech in which Hitler summoned Britain to capitulate to his will.

"I will not waste your time by dealing with Hitler's distortions of almost every main event since the war began.

"He says he had no desire to destroy the British Empire, but there was in his speech no suggestion of the peace which must be based on justice and no word of recognition that the other nations of Europe have any right to the self-determination principle which he has so often invoked for Germany.

House Shelves Demand Over U. S.-Soviet Pact

The House by unanimous consent yesterday shelved a resolution by Representative Fish (Republican), of New York, calling upon President Roosevelt to tell the House if there was any secret pact or agreement between the United States and Soviet Russia.

A few minutes earlier the House Foreign Affairs Committee had rejected the resolution.

Al Smith to 'Walk' Once Again

New ork, July 22 (AP).—The New York Herald Tribune says that former Gov. Alfred E. Smith and other prominent Democrats soon will announce their opposition to a third term for President Roosevelt and will support Republican Presidential Nominee Wendell L. Willkie.

Smith conferred today with Jouett Shouse, of Kentucky, who was Assistant Secretary of the Treasury under President Wilson, and John J. Raskob, Smith's campaign manager in the 1928 Presidential campaign, the Tribune said.

"The major topic of the conference," it added, "was how to capitalize the antithird-term sentiment most effectively in behalf of Mr. Willkie."

Determined Britain

Lord Halifax, in his speech of yesterday, did not specifically close the door upon any peace proposal that may be made. But the contrast he drew between the objectives for which Germany and Great Britain are fighting leaves virtually no hope that further bloodshed can be avoided.

The British government has interpreted Hitler's speech to the Reichstag last week as a demand for the right to "lord it over" the conquered peoples of Europe. Great Britain still hopes to reestablish in Europe a "free association of independent states." The contrast between these two ideals is so great, in the opinion of Foreign Secretary Halifax, that the British people will remain unmoved by Hitler's so-called appeal to reason.

Unquestionably the British realize that their country and the empire which they have built are in grave danger. The military might of Germany is no longer open to dispute. But this peril and added warnings from Berlin that the "zero hour" is approaching have brought no wavering in the British position. Such courage and determination must win the admiration of even those who are willing to make far-reaching sacrifices and compromises in the interest of peace.

Perilous as her position is, moreover, Great Britain probably has concluded that continuation of the war is the safest course she can pursue for the present. Faith in a reasonable settlement with the conqueror of Europe is negligible. And even if agreement upon terms for an end of hostilities could be reached, the British people would have no confidence in the willingness of the German government to live up to its pledges.

So it appears inevitable that the war should continue for the present. Flushed with triumph on the continent, the Nazis are scarcely in the mood of generous compromise. And the British are obviously determined not to bow to the German military machine so long as they have the power to resist and some hope, however tenuous, of a final victory.

Address Unknown

It is hard to understand why the inhabitants of the Bahamas should be so much worried about the proper manner in which to address the Duke of Windsor when he arrives. Nowadays, forms of address are becoming as standardized and as easy to remember as railway gauges and shoe lace lengths.

Of course, there are situations in which the new standardized forms of address seem scarcely adequate. When one's favorite has been called out on a close play at third base, or when one has had a new fender dented, for example, there is a tendency to revert to old and ceremonious forms of address. But for all ordinary purposes about a half dozen salutations suffice, viz.:

In addressing males of no apparent importance, "pal," "buddy" or "mac"; in addressing employers, cash customers and creditors, "sir"; in addressing males of somewhat academic or scientific aspect, "doc"; in addressing males of rather prosperous aspect, "chief"; in addressing any male over the age of 40, "pop." In doubtful cases the forms "colonel" or "professor" should be employed.

So here is a simple answer to the whole problem. Nobody expects the Governor of the Bahamas to like the celebrated shark hunter. But since they are doubtful about what he should answer to, why don't the Bahamans just address him as "professor." That, you may remember, is how a Southern-born aide at the White House solved the problem of addressing the late Booker Washington.

. . . answer to "hi!" or any old cry,

Traditionally, to be sure, dukes, like archbishops and mitered abbots, are entitled to be addressed as "Your Grace." But that brings up the old story about the washerwoman, whose principal client, a certain duchess, had neglected to pay her for several months. The poor woman finally hit upon the expedient of writing a bill and sending her little daughter to present it. But first she carefully coached the child in the proper manner of behaving in the presence of royalty. "And whatever you do, my dear, you must not forget to say, 'Your Grace,' to her."

So the dutiful child, as she curtsied and placed the paper in the duchess' hands, began gravely to recite:

O Lord, for whatever we are about to receive through Thy bounty let us be humbly grateful . . .

And we dare say that is the spirit in which the people of the Bahamas await their new Governor General.

The Keynote At Havana

Final liquidation of the tiny Baltic states bordering on Soviet Russia coincides with the opening of the Pan-American Conference at Havana. Of course, there is no connection between the two events. Nor is there any similarity between the techniques which they illustrate. But they do afford opportunity for an interesting study in contrasts.

Like the United States and other American republics, Soviet Russia is deeply concerned by the fact that Germany has gained control of Europe by aggressive warfare. While Hitler is still fighting the British, the Moscow dictator is hastening to strengthen his defenses. He has wrested territory from Finland and Rumania, in addition to sharing with Germany the spoils of defeated Poland. Now Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania are about to become provinces in the Soviet Union.

For several months these countries have been controlled from Moscow. The petitions of their puppet governments for incorporation of the three states into the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics constitute only the legalistic sugar-coating on Stalin's aggressive policy. To strengthen the U. S. S. R. he does not hesitate to destroy the independence of neighboring countries.

Delegates of the 21 American republics have met in Havana in the belief that a more rational and humane system for the protection of national security can be worked out. The keynote of the Havana conference, as sounded by Secretary of State Hull yesterday, is cooperation. Mr. Hull was emphatic in his denial that this effort to evolve a mutual defense policy for the nations of this hemisphere is aimed at any non-American power. His ardent and persuasive appeal was designed to foster the development of cooperative machinery that will enable each of the 21 republics to maintain its freedom and integrity.

It can scarcely be said that Secretary Hull fully outlined the means by which this end may be achieved. He advocated further study of trade problems, the "creation of facilities for the temporary handling and orderly marketing of accumulated surpluses" in the American republics, and the development of commodity agreements. About the same time President Roosevelt asked Congress for new powers and $500,000,000 in increased capital for the Export-Import Bank.

Between these rather vague proposals and the development of a practical basis for greater economic cooperation among the American republics there is a wide gulf. If a workable plan is to be evolved, it will have to distribute responsibilities among all the nations that draw benefits from it. And the close economic ties between most of the Latin-American states and Europe must be clearly recognized.

Mr. Hull's appeal for a "joint approach" to the problem of territory in the Western Hemisphere belonging to European belligerents stands out in particularly sharp contrast to totalitarian practice. If efforts are made in Europe to modify the existing status of these areas, he proposes the immediate establishment of a "collective trusteeship, to be exercised in the name of all the American republics." That trusteeship would continue until the territory in question could be returned to its present owner or its independence could be established and maintained.

The statesmen at Havana may not find any complete solution for these baffling problems. No doubt it will be easier to reach a common understanding as to mutual defense measures and territorial problems than as to control of trade. But in any event, the American nations are giving the distracted world an encouraging demonstration of the cooperative method in international relations. That is the basic significance of the Havana conference.

When the specific measures advocated and perhaps agreed upon in the Cuban capital have been forgotten, the spirit of mutual helpfulness which is emerging from the Pan-American movement may well be a powerful force in the evolution of a better world.

Apology To Mr. Hoover

In an editorial published yesterday under the caption, "A Poor Excuse," The Post inadvertently did former President Hoover an injustice by forgetting that he promptly offered his resignation as Secretary of Commerce to President Coolidge following his nomination for the Presidency.

The Post deeply regrets this error. Even so, our position seems to be somewhat less embarrassing than that of Secretary Wallace, who made the original mistake of supposing that Secretary Hoover had set a precedent which would justify the present Secretary of Agriculture in clinging to his job while he campaigns for the Vice Presidency.

"I believe," Mr. Wallace said in attempting to justify his own intentions, "Herbert Hoover remained in the Cabinet when he was campaigning for the Presidency, didn't he?" It is true that Mr. Hoover was nominally a member of the Cabinet until August 21, 1928—10 days after delivery of his acceptance speech. But his resignation was in the hands of President Coolidge on July 7, and a few days later he had completed his work as head of the Department of Commerce, preparatory to journeying to California to receive formal notification of his nomination.

This record certainly does not provide Mr. Wallace with even a shred of precedent for clinging to his Cabinet post while running for office. On the contrary, it emphasizes the impropriety of retaining a position that, rightly or wrongly, lays him open to charges of using the powers of office to attract votes.

High-Handed Proposal

John L. Lewis has renewed his efforts to make strict observance of the provisions of the National Labor Relations Act a condition precedent to the awarding of Government contracts. Specifically, he favors issuance of an executive order which would require all firms engaged on Government contracts to comply with NLRB orders and permit the National Defense Commission to terminate any contract in case of failure to comply.

Briefly, Mr. Lewis is urging official blacklisting of concerns failing to render prompt and unquestioning obedience to the NLRB. The orders of the board are subject to review by the courts and only if sustained can they be enforced. Under the Lewis plan, however, a firm might be denied a contract because of its refusal to obey an order that may be subsequently set aside by the courts.

President Roosevelt's doubts as to the legality of an executive order requiring Government contractors to adhere to the provisions of the Wagner Act seem to be well founded. But whether valid or not, it would be indefensible procedure to apply executive coercion to firms that insist on having their rights determined in court. The NLRB was created to interpret and administer the Labor Relations Act. If the law is being flagrantly violated by important concerns, as Mr. Lewis charges, the remedy lies in more effective law enforcement or in changes in the law itself to make enforcement less difficult.

We certainly cannot afford to inject controversies over the Wagner Act into the defense program at this critical juncture. Effective cooperation between Government and industry in the work of strengthening the Nation's defenses would be seriously impeded if contracting firms were forced to become the docile slaves of the National Labor Relations Board.

The Buses Of Vichy

Last week a tragic procession passed through Vichy. It consisted of refugees returning to Paris in 140 buses—buses from the streets of Paris, with pitiful belongings tied to their little rear platforms.

This pathetic portion of the human stream which poured out of Paris in the last weeks of May induces a parallel—and a contrast. Early in September, 1914, the army of Gen. von Kluck was less than 20 miles from Paris and confident of victory. Gen. Joffre, who had been retreating doggedly, sent a message that "the hour has come to advance at all costs, and to die where you stand rather than give way."

Gen. Gallieni, the white-haired defender of Paris, loaded his troops into trucks, buses and taxicabs bound for the first Battle of the Marne. Later the taxis of Paris rattled home with victory registered on their meters.

In May, 1940, the German right, repairing the errors of 1914, was far to the west of Von Kluck's 1914 position. The order of "stand or die," delivered by another French general, was unavailing. And the buses went the other way, on a different mission. These are the buses of Vichy.

Still, we must give Hollywood credit for having a little originality. No matter how many times a plot is used, the picture is given a different title each time.

The first unorthodox thoughts come to a child when the Sunday school picnic is rained out.

From the Buffalo Evening News

By way of changing the subject from politics or war to something more cheerful, it may be worth while to consider for the moment the cantaloupe. It is coming into the market now, luscious in flavor and generous in size. It serves to bring to mind that with the possible exception of the grapefruit nothing in the American scene has shown greater advancement.

There was a time when this product was the great deceiver. The buyer would weigh it carefully in one hand and then in the other to determine if it were meaty. He would sniff it for the aroma of ripeness and finally press the ends with his fingers to test the softness. At home, he would hopefully slice open his selection, only to have it all too frequently turn out to be of color pale green and of flavor slightly like the cucumber. Now all that is changed and the cantaloupes come graded as to size and quality. Not often does the cantaloupe fail to fulfill high hopes. At this time, it can inspire Americans to hold fast to their faith in progress.

Keep Our Men Here

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There is a general sentiment over this country against our going into this war. I have heard that some accuse our President of trying to get us into the war! I give him credit for having more sound sense than that.

Germany wants all she can get. Italy wants control of the Mediterranean and some British possessions in Africa, and Russia has taken a slice of Rumania. Japan is having a hard time trying to swallow China, and wants to control British possessions there. So, with all this mixed-up mess, if we went in this war we would, before long, have to fight about all Europe, alone—and with what?

Hundreds of thousands of the flower of our young men slaughtered on foreign battlefields, "to make the world safe for democracy," and again fight a war, "to end all wars," would be even more futile than it was before!

This does not mean that we should not give England all the material help we can, but we should keep our man-power on this side of the Atlantic. Those who would have to do the fighting do not want any war on foreign soil.

Hundreds of thousands of Germans are enslaved by the military power of Germany, and have been going to the slaughter for the lust for power of Adolf Hitler! What will it profit them if Hitler gains the whole world, and they no longer live in it? It all seems a rather "dumb" proposition, does it not?

The End Of An Epoch

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We are living in 1940 at the end of an epoch. Epochs do not end overnight or in a year or two. The beginnings of the end of this era can be traced back to 1870 and beyond. But the pace of transition has visibly quickened since 1932 both at home and abroad, more so abroad than at home, until after a succession of crises the climax and denouement seem close at hand.

The old order is now ending in a revolution that is political, economic and moral in character and world-wide in scope. Its demise is marked and abetted by brutal and lightning wars, by the rapid spread of totalitarian economics, by the disintegration and decay of traditional forms and customary economic and political institutions and by the subtle and pervasive loss of faith in the values of Christian democracy. The foundations of Western civilization are collapsing before our eyes.

Why is the old order expiring and what will be the shape of things to come? Those who were living in the United States in the summer of 1940 still had time to ponder these questions before they, too, were overwhelmed by the resistless forces that were sweeping the world.

While superficial reasons were given for the flood of daily events that reflected the deeper current of affairs, the growing collapse of the ancient regime seemed attributable to certain underlying conditions and tendencies. Chief among them on the European stage were the bitter rivalries of the great powers for economic gain, political power and national prestige, their failure after the first World War to develop a modus vivendi, the sense of frustration felt by the so-called "have-not" nations, the lust for power and revenge on the part of their leaders, and the predatory animus, the warlike bent and the habitual subservience to authority that have been cultural traits of the Germanic peoples since time immemorial. Of these, the last is first among the basic factors that have brought the affairs of Europe to their present climax. The decline of leadership in the democratic countries and the loss of faith in free institutions under the corrosive impact of competing ideologies also played a prominent part.

In the United States, on the other hand, the fundamental forces that were undermining democracy appeared to be no less inexorable, although matters here had not yet reached the same degree of disintegration as abroad; still, they had attained a sufficient pitch of economic stagnation, political deadlock and psychological hysteria to justify objective students of social trends in forecasting the same general outcome, mutatis mutandis, though at a somewhat later point in time. Here the chief contributing factors making toward the demise of democracy were the inveterate spirit of pecuniary gain and speculative profit at all costs even of the common welfare, the consequent steady erosion of the material and human resources of the Nation, the growth of group utilitarianism and the incorrigible pluralism of competing sectional interests, giving rise to deeply divided counsels and a polity of pressure groups.

Immersed in the maelstrom of these tidal forces, not even the most prescient could clearly foresee the precise shape of things to come. Yet the general outlines of the future were beginning to unfold beneath the camouflage of competing ideologies, the egocentric prattle of provincial politicians and the groping gyrations of bewildered bureaucrats busily engaged at the councils of national defense in repeating the abortive abracadabra of NRA days. Past trends would project themselves into the future and be accelerated by the exigencies of war. The further decline of competition within the American economy could be anticipated, together with the progressive extension of public control of economic life regardless of fluctuations in party politics. Thanks to the onward sweep of technical advance, the transition from small enterprise to giant industry would continue apace. Property interests would struggle to retain their hegemony over economic and political affairs, but the state would steadily extend its control over the machinery of investment and credit, the management of basic industries, the distribution of the labor force and the direction of foreign trade. The vigorous campaign to arrest and reverse the growing concentration of economic power by sweeping investigations of spreading monopoly and by pulmotor attempts to resuscitate the antitrust laws seemed destined for the same fate that befell Secretary Hull's heroic efforts to revive international trade via reciprocal agreements. The world was about to be divided, it appeared, into four or five great continental monopolies, each dominated by some master nation. In brief, as the climaxing forties gathered momentum, the direction of western society appeared to be toward a limited number of administered economies under the impact of technological and psychological imperatives, but the precise shape that these impersonal, universal and inexorable trends would assume under the drive of the dynamics of empirical collectivism remained concealed in the furled scroll of destiny.

Save Mr. Roosevelt

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In his letter dated July 16, Mr. Robert F. Bower would seem afraid of a draft which might abrogate his "civil liberties." Then, following a rather back-handed compliment to your truly great paper, he indulges in a lengthy panegyric of President Roosevelt as the "only man" capable of protecting those liberties. Myself, still worn out with listening to the stuffy, dictator-ridden, fearsome thing that was the National Democratic Convention of sorry, not to say shameful, history, I cannot see eye to eye with Mr. Bower.

When the Nation is conscripted to aid democracies, by actually aiding democracies to win the war, I wonder whether Mr. Bower will realize that there is a high privilege that attaches to liberty which is called by the old-fashioned name "responsibility." An honest recognition of responsibility forbids imposition of one's burden on to someone else. Surely Mr. Bower is selfish in forcing responsibility for his "individual liberty" on Mr. Roosevelt.

After eight long years of struggle and strain in protecting the liberties of a grateful people, Mr. Roosevelt is tired. He said so. He said that he would like to retire; that a man of his years should be entitled to carry out his plans for a private life.

Shall we not help the President to realize those dreams, Mr. Bower? Let us be magnanimous, you and I. Let us, and also millions of other Americans, save Mr. Roosevelt from sacrificing himself, and save ourselves from too much strain on our gratitude to him.

Women In Trousers

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial, "Shall Men Wear Shorts?" calls for a loud "Yes," and not only that, but let them wear dresses, also, in order that "femininity" may not be lost from the earth. Women have, literally and figuratively, gone in for trousers—of any or no length at all. Their styles call for a man's hips, yet, oddly enough, for busts—ornamental only.

The feminine sex is, of course, celebrating its earthly emancipation, which was ushered in with the World War and, like most amateurs, overdoes it before striking the balance. To what lengths it will go at the end of the present war can only be imagined. But a recently published masculine complaint epitomizes things: "Men want their women feminine, with a sweet air of mystery about them."

Styles don't do much to human nature. Let the desexed creatures flap on. It leaves all the less competition for the sweet, old-fashioned girls who are the ones who get and keep the weddings rings. C. J.

For A Clean City

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I was attracted by the editorial in The Washington Post July 17, entitled "Appeal to Decency"—a topic in which I am deeply interested.

May I as a citizen of Washington, the Nation's Capital—which should be beautiful not in certain sections but throughout the entire city—sincerely thank the new District Cleanliness Association for starting what I consider the most important movement in the District.

Cleanliness creates happiness, and citizens who have no civic pride to observe it should be made to do so. Many mornings when I see the street on which I live covered with trash I become discouraged and wonder why the District lawmakers do not make and enforce a law to the effect that every occupant of every home must keep clean and tidy all of his property—from the alley to the street.

The Post Impressionist

Second Generation Washingtonian

This monograph is intended to put into popular form the results of intensive research carried on by a devoted band of scholars, of which I am a humble one, into the life and habits of that little known species, the Second Generation Washingtonian. It is hoped that this piece will encourage others to join us in what we feel is a noble work.

Only a small troop of men, courageously laboring night and day, have studied this social phenomenon. It is curious that this should be so for the Second General Washingtonian is a most rare and delicate animal, the like of which can be found nowhere but in the District of Columbia, and, I may add, very rarely there. But once under observation his characteristics are so highly defined that no student with a seeing eye can fail correctly to categorize him.

The student in search of this rare species will find that once tracked down he is not hard to capture. In fact he practically asks for capture. If female she will ask for capture. The story of the disease that attacks female residents of Washington, naturally more aggravated in those conditioned to it from birth, is another story and has been the subject of extensive discussion in public and in private.

To return to the capture. Let us say our hypothetical student is attending some social gathering in Washington and the talk has turned, as it always does, to where the people present are from. (Conversation in Washington always resembles that on a desert island when the shipwrecked compare notes as to what they did before they were marooned.) Our student will note when such a conversation begins, an unobtrusive gentleman (or lady) who sits back quietly in his chair with an expectant look on his face as if he were waiting for something. He is. He is waiting for that inevitable moment when some member of the company will turn to him and say, "And where are you from?" Then, with the air of one who is dropping a bomb, he will reply, "I am a Washingtonian," and sit back and wait for the explosion. He is never disappointed. Serious students of this species have sometimes pondered the question as to whether this is not the moment that a Second Generation Washingtonian lives for. Few of us are given the ability to cause so much consternation and excitement by a simple statement of four words.

As a student dealing in facts, I must admit that there are recorded instances, pitiable to contemplate, when two Second Generation Washingtonians have been present at such a moment as I have outlined above. Trained observers who vouch for this say two strange cats meeting on a back fence are nothing to the hate and fury displayed by one of the species to the other at such a time. It is the experts' considered opinion that the psychological scars resulting are of lifelong duration.

But let us turn from this sad occurrence which is, fortunately, extremely uncommon, to consider other aspects of this rara avis.

First there is the question of identification by sound. This can only be done accurately by the specialist in the field who has made a thorough study of the subject. I only want to give here certain pointers to aid the novice in his first experiments. For complete and detailed references see textbooks on the problem by the more pedantic of my colleagues.

The speech of the Second Generation Washingtonian is confusing to the tyro because it is hybrid. You will find him using certain colloquialisms drawn from every region of the United States. You will, for instance, hear him use the expression "you all" and if you are not a Southerner you may mistake him for one because of the associations this expression has for you. The same is true of certain Northern, Middle-Western, and Western phrases. Do not be confused by this. The best plan is to study carefully for a day or so the conversation of anyone you may suspect of being a member of this genus and if, at the end of that time, you feel the subject must have spent his formative years in a trunk that got lost and was shipped all over the United States, you can be fairly certain you are on the right trail. If, on top of this, there is a complete lack of any kind of accent, such as a drawl or twang, you had better call me to report your discovery.

And now as to the ancestry and origin of the Second Generation Washingtonian. After much delving there has been a considerable volume of work compiled on this phase of the subject. I shall give but a brief resume of the material here and, if you wish to dig more deeply into this angle, you can consult the authoritative sources.

In ancestry, as in speech, the Second Generation Washingtonian is usually cross-bred. There are only a few cases on record where the parents on both sides were, also, Washingtonians. As for those who have one grandparent who was a Washingtonian there is only one authenticated case known. Technically, of course, this example was not a Second Generation Washingtonian but since there was only one, and all the characteristics were the same, it was not felt practicable to set up a second category. Then, too, we felt that putting this isolated case in the same classification was more in accord with the American Way of labeling everyone with, for instance, a non-Anglo-Saxon surname a "Second Generation American" regardless of whether his progenitors fought in the Revolution.

Of course, there are always researchers who have a touch of the romantic and the visionary in them and these like to search for the species who has two grandparents who were Washingtonians. Every once in a while a rumor crops up that such a one has been found but, when tracked to its source, it is always proven false. I, myself, do not bother with these chimeras and my advice to you is to follow my example. After all one who hunts down a real honest-to-goodness case of the ordinary specimen has done no mean job. For to set us in the United States apart from all the rest of the world we have two phenomena, two wonders of the world, both, I regret to say, fast vanishing . . . the buffalo and the Second Generation Washingtonian.

Unhappy Paris

By Walter Kerr

Life In German-Occupied France

Note: Walter Kerr, who was a member of the New York Herald Tribune's Paris bureau when the city was surrendered, has sent this uncensored account of life in German occupied France by clipper plane from Lisbon, where he arrived last Monday.

GERMAN-OCCUPIED France is an economically twisted country, with its millions of people broken in spirit and doped with propaganda, groping about in an effort to organize their lives as best they can.

They have little money. Their homes are destroyed, inaccessible or unhappy until a long search brings news of a missing father, brother or son, who may be buried by a roadside in a grave marked by a rifle or bayonet or guarded in an overcrowded prison camp.

Thousands and thousands are out of work. Many are living on credit. Families are scattered. Transportation is available only to a few. Communications are out of reach. The food is poor.

Men and women are living under restrictions such as they never knew before and showing little resistance. They are concerned more with their daily needs and discussions among themselves as to what caused the collapse of their country.

The German army rules. All communication and transportation facilities are in its hands. It controls the essentials by right of requisition and superior force, and the nonessentials by the simple fact that it has all the easy money; that is, it is well provided with paper marks that have no value anywhere except in the occupied areas, not even in Germany itself.

The army is working night and day for the coming attack on England. Everything is subordinated to this preparation: Food for the masses, transportation of refugees back home, hospital care. And while long trainloads of men and munitions run all the time, and thousands of Dutch, Belgian and French cars carry soldiers about, a French-language press and radio controlled from Berlin keeps telling the people how much the German army is doing for the people and the millions of refugees.

It is true the army is helping. Daily it takes Belgians to the north in Belgian trucks it captured on its march through the Low Countries. Thousands are taken home by rail in French rolling stock. But all this is proceeding slowly, for the army has military work to do before it has time to move families back home and transport food from the farms to market.

THAT IS WHY food is scarce in Paris, although the country is loaded down with meat, fresh vegetables, potatoes and dairy products. The stuff is there, but there are not enough men to handle it and not enough trucks to carry it. And so in Paris today the city of good food in time of peace, you will get no fresh fish and no fresh meat, only frozen meat and a choice of one or two vegetables. Milk, butter and eggs are luxuries.

This food shortage and the scarcity of money are not entirely the faults of the German occupying force. The banks and the trucks and the refugees went south before it arrived. But the German army is taking its time in setting them right.

As long as the people feel the way they do, overpowered by an army of occupation and bewildered by their own collapse, Frenchmen will show little resistance to German arguments. The old story of "the Jews," "the politicians" and "the English" is being told all day long.

And yet there is an undercurrent of resistance. Some weeks ago posters were displayed urging the people to have confidence in their German friends, that they had been betrayed by their leaders and now were being fed by German soldiers. The penalty for defacing one of these signs was death. But I do not know of one of them in Paris that has not been ripped and torn.

I could name restaurant proprietors, good men who have fed their clients for weeks, who tell German soldiers that their radios do not work so that they do not have to listen to German broadcasts. I know of many Frenchmen who listen constantly to the London radio, although the penalty is severe.

I DO NOT KNOW how well the story has been told of the first day when the Germans moved into the city. Paris is still cut off from the rest of the world.

When the army marched in the Associated Press and the United Press, the Chicago Tribune and the New York Herald Tribune were the only American newsgathering organizations represented. The rest had gone South.

But the hands of the men who stayed in the city were tied behind their backs. The night of the occupation the Berlin representatives of the three American news agencies arrived and early the following morning they filed their stories, without having communicated with any American, even in their own Paris offices, and without having talked to a single Frenchman. They were under orders and they followed them, but obviously they could not hope to cover the occupation of Paris adequately without talking to a Parisian.

SO I DO NOT know how much of the story has been told. I do not know whether the suicide of Dr. Thierry de Martel, the greatest brain surgeon in France, has been reported adequately. He died in grief and as a protest to the men who let this country go to pieces. I do not know whether the story has been told of the way French prisoners were handled, whether it was reported that many were kept in the damp grounds of the Elysee Palace until the American Hospital protested, until ambulances were sent for and the men placed under doctors' care.

The first French-language newspapers appeared soon after the occupation. First was La Victoire, published by the Frenchman, Gustave Herve, an anti-Democrat at heart and pro-German by inclination. But his pro-Germanism was not pro-German enough to suit the Germans. They suppressed his paper the day he wrote an editorial advising his readers to beware of an unjustified press campaign against the British.

Then came Le Matin, published by its owner, Maurice Bunau-varilla, which soon became a potent weapon of German propaganda. A few days ago its editor for 40 years, Stephane Lauzanne, the man who published the paper in the south after the government had left Paris, with the Matin editorial staff and the Matin policy, resigned his position. The Matin of today is too much for him.

This newspaper and others like it, some violently anti-Jewish, all anti-British, are on the streets every day. They are carefully controlled by the Germans. Mistakes in grammar indicate that many of the articles are written by them. It is not a coincidence that one of the first Germans in Paris after the occupation was a man in control of the press, Capt. Vongrothe, once a correspondent in Paris of the Duetsches Nachrichten Bureau, an organization which is still regarded as a news agency in many parts of the world.

It is perhaps inevitable that the German language itself is spreading. Menus in many restaurants are printed in both languages, although there is such little choice that not many words are used. French-German dictionaries are sold on the streets. German-language signs are posted, such as one before the Crillon: Parken auf diesem platz verboten (parking on this square forbidden). That is one word that is sinking in, verboten. A waiter at the Cafe de la Paix told me he had learned to count to 20 in German.

He will have to. The Germans have the money, or what passes for money. They fill the cafes and restaurants. It is unwise to disobey them.

What a city Paris has become! The Germans are everywhere. It ceased to be an open city the day they arrived. Their generals and honored guests occupy every big hotel. Their men occupy the smaller ones. They operate in public buildings such as the Chamber of Deputies, the Aual D'Roawy, the Invalides and the Ecole Militaire. Their motorized equipment is all over the place.

It is true that things are not as bad in the city as they were a few weeks ago, although no one can tell what the country and its people will face when the offensive against England starts or when the bill for the costs of the army of occupation is presented.

Vindicating Farley

HERE ARE POINTS in which the long association and final estrangement of President Roosevelt and Jim Farley closely resemble the case of Gene Tunney and Uncle Will Gibson, the manager of prize fighters who bought Gene, cheap as a stringy apprentice, and finally crowned him with that honor which, back in the era of wonderful nonsense, was poetically known as the highest bauble in fistiana's realm.

Mr. Tunney, now a substantial purveyor of nutritious, character-building whisky, may not relish the likening of himself to the President in this respect, for I believe he disadmires Mr. Roosevelt and shares the popular feeling that he did not do right by Mr. Farley. But the comparison will grow more convincing as I proceed.

For the sake of the historical record I think it should be noted that both the President and Mr. Tunney were queer ones in their respective lines of work, and both unbiddable. And, for the same sake, I would point out that, although Jim saw promise in Mr. Roosevelt, and, in a careless way of speaking, made him champion. Mr. Roosevelt, like Tunney, possessed the raw material, including stubbornness, courage, self-esteem and other comparable qualities without which no manager could have done much with either man.

THE PRESIDENT was a dilettante politican whose affability with the red-necked professionals was artificial, and Tunney, in a day when fighters were hilarious bums with no literary taste above the funnies and the Police Gazette, seemed more fitted for the priesthood than the ring. Moreover, he was built like A No. 1, and, with his chest blown out to give an impression of great physical development, looked like a Christmas stocking with an orange in it.

Neither Mr. Roosevelt nor Tunney, at the time each was singled out for a future by a manager with great imagination, presented much promise to the naked and unperceiving eye of the public. In discerning qualities which were not apparent to others, in rating their respective boys along and in match-making, this latter an important work which Farley had observed when he was a prize fight commissioner, both Jim and Uncle Will Gibson earned credit.

But James must have seen, just as Uncle Will did, early in the game, that he was handling no ordinary man, Tunney had a tendency to run with outlandish company as strange to pugilism as, later on, Mr. Roosevelt's Ivy League friends and bleeding heart coat holders were to politics. Gene would surround himself with dudes and scholars and gold coast glory-hunters who would sit around reading books without any pictures in them or choose up sides and whang each other with long words. And Uncle Will would go off down the road or back to town wagging his head and more than half-believing that this guy was nuts.

JUST SO, it may have been noticed that Mr. Roosevelt preferred the company of professors and queer numbers calling themselves economists, sociologists and whatever the hell, and that, after he got the title, Mr. Farley began to lose ground with him professionally and personally. Uncle Will used to squirm with humiliation and rage on finding Gene's new friends discussing fighting methods and putting ideas into him when he, Bill Gibson, was a professional handler who had been good enough for Benny Leonard and many another successful tiger.

And Farley's sensations were, because they must have been, about the same when he discovered such men as Moley, Tugwell, Corcoran, Cohen, Douglas, Wallace and Harold Ickes, an ex-amateur who had never won so much as a sub-novice bout even in the shoving around the champion whom he had brought along to the title and crowding Jim Farley out. What did those mugs know about politics.

Both Tunney and Mr. Farley's champion were susceptible to phoneys whom Uncle Will and James would have run out of camp if they had had their way. But Gene had to discover his own mistakes, some of which cost him much misery and money, and the history of the Roosevelt Presidency has vindicated Jim Farley's judgment of some of the mane-tossing class-room politicians whom Jim instinctively spotted as piece-men and climbers.

TOWARD THE END of Tunney's career Uncle Will was a miserable stranger in the camp of his own champion, who now had ideas of his own so strong and revolutionary that not even his fancy friends controlled him any longer. He made his own matches, handled his own business and trained and fought as he liked, and once, in fighting as he liked, was knocked rubber-legged by a Mr. Dempsey, but still came on to win.

I drop the parallel here with Mr. Farley paid off and retired and with President Roosevelt still in full career and surrounded by a queer company of political high-suburbanites but so full of himself by now that they awe him no more.

He will be lucky, and so will we all, if one of them doesn't foot the bucket out of the ring or mislay the smelling salts just when the need is greatest, as amateurs often do in moments of crisis.

Party Cooperation

By Mark Sullivan

Deep-Down Opposition To Third Term

THIS IS ONE of the times when it would be enlightening if we could assay and reduce to words that intangible thing called "the atmosphere of Washington." Here are Democrats returning from the proceedings at Chicago. Here are Republicans who remained in the Capital, awaiting the reassembling of Congress. What do these groups feel about the momentous thing that was done at Chicago last week—the abandonment of the third-term tradition by one of America's two great parties?

The Republicans wish it had not happened. Their wish is not based on any belief that some other nominee than Mr. Roosevelt might have been easier for the Republicans to beat. Their regret goes deeper than politics. They feel that something far-reaching has happened, far-reaching and ominous. When Republicans meet their Democratic friends, the attitude is not, on either side, one of genial "kidding." They may do that publicly. But privately their attitude is one of shared seriousness. The greeting of a Republican to a Democratic friend is like a greeting to one in whose family something regrettable has occurred—something one would not speak of, except it is so sensational that silence about it would be pointed. And the response of the Democrat to his Republican friend is in much the same spirit.

IN BOTH PARTIES, the men who rise toward the top and remain there, those who are repeatedly reelected to Congress and come to have leadership there, have a common quality. They are rivals, of course. As spokesmen of their respective parties, they debate, and wage party war. But they hold in common a sense of trust for the American form of government, including the traditions that go with it.

Essential in the American form, as they see it, is the limitation of the Presidential tenure to two terms. This tradition is now impaired. In the election next November, it may be destroyed. This is regretted by the more thoughtful leaders of both parties. The superficial disposition, shown to the public, may be for the Republicans to attack the Democrats for doing it, or permitting it or condoning it. But deep down are the materials for party cooperation to resist the innovation, much as there was party cooperation to resist Mr. Roosevelt's attempt to change the Supreme Court three years ago.

THE NEWSPAPERS seek out Democrats who announce that they will leave the party on the third-term issue, as Democratic Senator Burke, of Nebraska, has done. But the larger measure of Democratic dissent is to be found among men who do not announce their opposition yet, or may never announce it. It would be almost rash to suppose that the Democratic campaign this year will be fought with the same earnestness and resolution as in 1936 and 1932. It is not merely that the third-term issue will introduce doubt and reluctance into the hearts of some of the ablest and most highly placed Democratic leaders. In addition, the absence of National Chairman Farley—and the reasons for his absence, which every prominent Democrat understands—will work to the same end.

To one group, the New Dealers as distinct from the Democrats, the third-term nomination is completely pleasing. It is their triumph. They are largely responsible for the maneuvering which, over a period of a year and a half, brought about the third nomination. They will fight wholeheartedly for the election of Mr. Roosevelt in November.

It is common to say of the New Dealers that they have little influence with the electorate. In the ordinary sense that is true. Almost none of the New Dealers, now and recently high in influence, was ever elected, either to his present office or any other office. That intimate of the President who pulled the wires at Chicago, Secretary of Commerce Harry Hopkins, is as strange to politics as he is to commerce.

BUT IF THE NEW DEALERS have little influence in politics in the ordinary sense, they have much influence in a new form of politics largely introduced into America by themselves. They have influence in what may be called class politics. They have command of immense funds, which go out to voters in the form of largesse. The New Dealer who is now the Democratic candidate for Vice President, Mr. Henry A. Wallace, is Secretary of Agriculture and titular head of AAA. As such, he has command of a larger quantity of public funds and a larger army of subordinates than was ever commanded by any chairman of a political party. True, there is the Hatch Act, supposed to limit political activity by Government employes. Nevertheless it is safe to say that a principal reason for nominating Mr. Wallace was the feeling that he would be supported by beneficiaries of AAA.

It would be as safe to say, as any other generalization, that the atmosphere of Washington is still one of slightly dazed shock. The third-term nomination was generally expected. Nevertheless, any innovation so portentous is more serious in the accomplished reality than was possible for the mere expectation to be. Further, it was generally expected by the Democrats that even if Mr. Roosevelt brought about his own renomination, he would stop at that. The belief was practically universal that the convention would be left free to choose the nominee for Vice President. When Mr. Roosevelt decreed that nomination, there was an uncomfortable realization that power seeks more power. And that is precisely the argument against a third term.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Echoes of the Past

"Yes, sir," said the man with the faraway look in his eyes, "I am a retired bathing beach censor. Why did I retire? The business just petered out, that's all. It petered out completely. But it seems only yesterday when naked women on a public beach were opposed."

The retired censor sighed. "I remember when it caused quite a commotion if a lady stripped in public," he resumed. "It may be hard for you to believe that today, of course, but there was a time—and it wasn't so long ago—when she had to wear something."

• • • •

"Are you positive?" asked the reporter.

"Absolutely," replied the retired censor. "It was considered not only improper and a bit immoral for women to bathe in the nude but illegal. Every summer in every community there was a drive against nakedness on the bathing beaches. You'd be surprised what a fuss used to be made. Every beach had a censor."

"Not really!" exclaimed the reporter, who was very young.

"I'm telling you the gospel truth," said the retired censor. "Every newspaper carried stories about the campaign. There seemed to be a widespread belief that the girls ought to wear something."

"Just what were a censor's duties?" asked the reporter.

"He presided at the beaches and saw that there was some modesty here and there," went on the retired censor. "He walked up and down and when he saw a woman who seemed to be under the impression she was in the privacy of her own bath he spoke sharply to her. Sometimes he even made an arrest."

• • • •

"You're kidding," insisted the young reporter.

"Not at all. Any number of 'em were taken to court for not having something resembling a skirt on below the waist and for not being at least 30 per cent covered above. The judges used to get quite indignant about it. Of course that was away back in the days when most women wore some clothes, especially outdoors in the summer."

"Do you really remember as far back as that?" asked the young reporter.

"Certainly. I can remember when they even put a skirt on to do their morning shopping at summer resorts," boasted the retired censor.

"Now I know you're just joking," said the reporter.

"I can see you don't believe a word of it," sighed the retired censor. "Why, young man, don't you realize that there was a time when bathing beauty parades used to attract a crowd? Don't you believe that a few years ago a parcel of beautiful young ladies appearing in public with practically not a stitch on would make people turn their heads?"

"Naw," scoffed the reporter.

"There's no use," said the retired censor wearily. "But it seems only yesterday."

The Candidate

"I have no wish to ride," he said,
"That purpose I must pass;"
Then climbed into the car quite red
And cried, "Step on the gas!"

"I don't propose to fly again;
To do so would be crude,"
He said, then hopped aboard the plane
And cried, "More altitude!"

"I do not wish to sail," he said,
"I've had enough, 'tis true;"
Then cried, "Ah, there's a breeze ahead!
Let's use the motor, too!"

Ima Dodo is so excited over Mr. Farley's treatment at Chicago that she says she is going to vote for the Yankee ball club for President just to get even.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Back To Realities

NOW THAT the conventions are over, we shall quickly discover how little the politicians in either of them were able to anticipate and define the real issues with which the people will be concerned. For the keynote addresses, the platforms, and the nominating speeches ignored entirely, or concealed in deliberately ambiguous language, the transcendent issues with which the Nation is confronted and the radical transformation of their habits which is now imposed upon the people.

To attend these conventions was to step for a brief moment out of the real world into a world of illusion, and under the spell of that illusion to imagine that the party politicians were still in a position to decide whether to conduct the campaign on this issue or that, that they could still pick and choose whether to debate "foreign policy" or "domestic policy." All this, we shall see, was pure illusion; we shall see that events and not the formulae of the platform committees will pose the issues in foreign policy; we shall see that the issues of foreign policy will transfigure every issue of domestic policy. New Dealism and anti-New Dealism alike will be washed out, as a matter of fact are washed out, by events, and if the politicians still dwell upon these obsolete issues, it is because they have not yet nerved themselves to facing the real issue.

ONLY TWO MONTHS have passed since the German armies broke through the Allied lines on the Western Front. Consider what has already happened in the United States as the direct consequence of this event. Congress has authorized the construction of a two-ocean navy. Why? Because the country knows that if Britain is conquered as France was conquered, America will be completely isolated in an armed and unfriendly world. Congress has also authorized the raising of a large army and air force, and very probably this will be done by peacetime conscription. Why? Because Congress knows that the second navy cannot be built in less than four or five years; that, therefore, a second line of defense is necessary while our first line of defense, the Navy, is being strengthened.

This is what has happened in two months as a result of the Battle of France. In the next three months, that is to say, before the votes are counted in November, the Battle of Britain will be fought. It may be decided. The consequences of the Battle of Britain will be infinitely greater for the United States than were the consequences of the Battle of France. If Hitler makes good his threat, he will, as he indicated in his speech, bring about a revolution in Great Britain. Either by conquering the British, or as he perhaps hopes by intimidating and demoralizing them, he will destroy the present coalition of Churchill Conservates and the Labor Party and replace it by a British government as subject to his purposes as the present government of France.

IF HE SUCCEEDS, this country will be facing the consequences not only of a British defeat but the very much more ominous consequences of the incorporation of the British imperial connections in the Hitler empire. We worry now about the small colonial possessions of France and the Netherlands; if Britain is revolutionized, we shall have this worry magnified a thousand-fold in Canada, in Australia, in South Africa, in Ireland, and in South America—and not only in these territories but in the whole realm of shipping and finance and commerce across all the oceans and with all the continents.

To imagine that this country can concern itself primarily with New Deal reforms and anti-New Deal complaints while it is building a two-ocean navy and conscripting an army and preparing for total defense is to lack foresight by losing sight of the present realities. The Battle of Britain involves our whole position in the Far East, the whole structure of the Monroe Doctrine, the whole question of whether we are to live in a democratic or totalitarian world. This battle is the most decisive battle of modern history. While it is in progress, we shall not be able to excite ourselves about the WPA and the SEC and the other topics in the old debate between New Dealers and anti-New Dealers.

THE FACT of the matter is that almost all the preconceptions of the Democrats and the Republicans about the organization of economic life are now obsolete in the presence of the country's need to prepare its defenses against total war. To prepare for total war—and building of a two-ocean Navy and a great air force and Army is preparation for total war—is impossible both under the New Deal conception of social reform and under the anti-New Deal conception of competitive private enterprise. There will be needed a new kind of planning—military planning—undreamed of by the former New Dealers, and an enlistment of executive and managerial talent which they have always avoided. There will be needed a new kind of regimentation—military regimentation—which differs from the regimentation that businessmen complain of under the New Deal, but differs no less from the free enterprise that they have hoped to return to.

We shall enter into an era of military organization, military planning centralized direction, conscription, regimentation and hard discipline. This is the price we have now to pay for having allowed ourselves to believe that we are not vitally concerned in the outcome of the war, for having trusted in the foolish promise that the oceans were our sufficient protection, for having taken the lunatic gamble of letting ourselves become isolated in the face of a world revolution against the whole system of life by which this country lives.

Washington Girls Retreat To Kahlert's Shady Trails

By Lucia Giddens

FORTY-FIVE girls and one grandmother matched enthusiasm for camping for 37 miles yesterday. At the end of the bus ride, they became inhabitants of a leafy waterfront at Y. W. C. A. Kamp Kahlert.

Two busloads of campers spanned the distance between Washington's hot pavements and the shady trails near Sudley, Md. As the buses headed into the countryside, a veteran camper and a newcomer sat across the aisle from each other and exchanged expectations.

Shirley March, 14, of 4303 Thirteenth street northeast, with her baggage, including a guitar, a ukulele and a repertoire of camp songs, was making her fifth visit.

JOYCE BUKER, 10 and dimpled, of 2637 Myrtle avenue northeast, had never been to camp before, but she brought a mighty determination to learn to swim.

Nearby sat Mrs. Marie Heister, a gray-haired grandmother who confided that she learned to swim at Kamp Kahlert when she was 65 years old. Mrs. Heister, who lives at 2633 Twelfth street northeast, stays at the senior camp, apart from the eight rustic cabins inhabited by the 10-to-18-year-old girls.

"But I'm a full-fledged camper, nevertheless, even if I am the only one who doesn't wear shorts," Mrs. Heister insisted. In the past she has attended camp simultaneously with her granddaughter, Judith Greenwood. But this summer Judith is the stay-at-home while grandmother goes in for the outdoor life and tries her hand at archery and other active pursuits.

THIRTY-THREE girls, staying over from the previous camp period displayed a considerable area of suntan and freckles to the newcomers who hastened to acquire the same badge of camp life.

In luncheon table conversation, Miss M. Florence Dunlap, camp director, and other officials explained something of the philosophy of the camp. Its activities are based not on competition, but on "learning to get along together." A waterfront demonstration in two weeks will give girls a chance to show their skills in swimming, boating and sailing—but not as rivals.

1. Off to camp they go without a care. The bus loads at the Y. W. C. A. on K street and the destination is cool Kamp Kahlert on the West River on the Bay. Then . . .

2. . . . arriving at the camp, the girls check in with the program director who assigns cabins. Shirley March, the subject of this picture story, is third from left. Next . . .

3. . . . the girls bring in cots and mattresses previous campers left outdoors to air. Shirley leads the bed parade. Plenty of play and rest is ahead, but beforehand . . .

5. . . . and Shirley is shown partaking of her first lunch at camp this season. This is her fifth summer at Kahlert. Minds are on play, though, and . . .

6. . . . the girls slip into bathing togs after a suitable interval after lunch and go down to West River, an inlet of the Chesapeake. There are canoeing and swimming and other water sports for the girls. Shirley is the lead paddler in this canoe full of campers. Strenuous play calls for . . .

7. . . . rest and Shirley is shown with her guitar in a get-acquainted period near the end of the day. Shirley brought musical instruments and has a full repertoire of camp songs which the girls will learn before the camping period closes

Club Takes Over Bridal Of Officer

Miss Helen C. Morton Wed to C. W. Saunders; Brackenridge Group Arranges Ceremony

IT IS NOT CUSTOMARY for a club to have a wedding, but the M. Eleanor Breckenridge Club had one June 15, when Helen Christine Morton became the bride of Charles Wood Saunders, son of Mr. and Mrs. V. L. Saunders, of Culpeper, Va.

The club was founded by Mrs. Erich W. Schwartze, its present president. She and Dr. Schwartze, of 1225 Talbert street southeast, are the bride's foster parents, and the bride is a newly elected officer of the organization. As a result the members took over details of the wedding plans and participated in the ceremony at the Schwartze home.

A pink and white color scheme was carried out. The bride was dressed in white chiffon lace and carried a bouquet of white roses. The bridesmaid, Miss Betty Ellis, wore pink taffeta and net and an old-fashioned hat of pink rosebuds and lace. She carried a bouquet of pink roses similar to the bride's.

Nine members of the club, dressed in white and wearing pink rosebud corsages, acted as ushers and formed an aisle for the bridal party. They were Mrs. Marion Russell, Miss Ethel Mackessy, Miss Lorena Reed, Mrs. Marie Landis, Miss Frances Harris, Miss Dorothy Williams, Mrs. Virgie Coates, Mrs. Harriet Mathews and Miss Louise Fincham.

MRS. CHAS. W. SAUNDERS

The bridegroom's brother, Carter Saunders, of Culpeper, acted as best man, and the bride was given in marriage by Dr. Schwartze. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Robert C. Savage, of Metropolitan Baptist Church.

After a reception in the garden the couple left on the Norfolk boat for Virginia Beach.

The bride, a former student of the University of Maryland, is now secretary to the comptroller of the university.

WHAT'S IN A NAME—The baby daughter of a North Carolina couple may never know when she grows up, that her unusual name, Delano Louise, is a 1940 Democratic-Republican combination.

Mrs. Edson Briggs, an active member of the League of Republican Women, is a North Carolinian and the only member of her family who is planning to vote for Wendell Willkie in November. In fact, her brother, Giles Yoemans Newton, former president of the North Carolina Society here, ran in the primary for Democratc nomination for Representative from his district, and it was a political call during his campaign that was responsible for the baby's name.

He stopped to see a young couple in the course of rounding up votes, and after he had talked politics, and had been assured they were good Democrats and were for him, he was asked to suggest a name for their baby daughter.

"You might name her Louise for my sister, Louise Briggs, in Washington," he said, as they brought out the infant for him to see.

Two weeks later he received a letter telling him they had taken his suggestion and, because they were also great admirers of President Roosevelt, they had named the child Delano Louise.

ENTERTAIN OFFICER—Members of Gamma Epsilon Chapter of Alpha Zeta Beta Sorority last Thursday entertained the immediate past president of the national organization, Mrs. Leiana Lea Crevolin, of San Marino, Calif., and her sister, Miss Margaret Magee, at the home of Mrs. John Winn, 611 Underwood street.

Mrs. Crevolin was elected president at the national convention here two summers ago and made many friends during her stay in the Capital. She and her sister were here last week on an Eastern tour following the national convention just closed in Indianapolis, at which Mrs. Wilma Wright, of San Diego, was elected to succeed her. Miss Clara Dikeman, of Beta Chi Chapter, of this city, was also a candidate for president.

Only one national office came to Washington this year, that of treasurer, for which Mrs. Myron Roveson, of Beta Psi Chapter was reelected.

Others from here who attended the conclave in Indianapolis were: Beta Chi Chapter, Mrs. John McLindon, president; Miss Edith Burns, Miss Kay Burns and Mrs. Stanton Kolb, province directors. Beta Psi, Mrs. Hans Werkmeister, president; Mrs. Robert Bishop, Miss Florence Bond, Miss Helen Bond, Miss Doris Travers, Miss Rachel Vanderbeek, Mrs. Mary Hornig and Miss Gladys Hicks. Alpha Gamma, Mrs. Mae Ruth Terrill. Beta Upsilon Chapter, Mrs. Dorothy Johnson and Mrs. Mary Belle McIntyre. Gamma Epsilon Chapter, Mrs. Oliver Donohoe, chapter president, and Mrs. Charles Wingfield.

Lothian Calls Britain the U.S. Maginot Line

Envoy Broadcasts Appeal for Armed Motorboats and Planes

Lord Lothian, British Ambassador to the United States, while predicting that his nation will hold out against the Nazis, last night made a strong plea for United States aid. Specifically he asked for warships and airplanes.

In a radio interview the Ambassador pictured Great Britain as America's Maginot Line. If the English can hold out for two years, then there is a good prospect of saving freedom for the world, he said. If they are defeated "your prospects and ours are very bad."

Speaking on a National Broadcasting Co. program in which he was questioned by the newspaper columnists, Drew Pearson and Robert Allen, Lord Lothian said the British people, who have been opposed to war since World War days, learned a costly lesson at Munich. Opposition to war resulted in unpreparedness for the Nazi onslaught that is now imminent, he said.

"For You to Decide"

"What type of war material would Great Britain like to get from the U. S. A.?" the ambassador was asked.

"Most urgently we need destroyers and armed motorboats to assist in preventing the invasion of Britain to deal with submarines," he replied. "A hundred of these now might mean the difference between success or failure. In the longer run, we need airplanes."

If Britain is over-run this autumn American prospects were held bad because "you have not today an army or an air force of modern size, and you have only one navy for two oceans."

"It is for you to decide what is in your own interest," Lord Lothian added, "but I should have thought that it was vital to you that Britain and the British navy should stay in being until your own rearmament, your two-ocean navy, your 50,000 airplanes and your big army were ready. Today, we are your Maginot Line."

Envoy Confident

"We think we can hold out against Germany," affirmed the envoy, "though we know we are up against a very tough proposition. . . . We don't think it is going to be so easy for Hitler to conquer England. Germany certainly understands about land war, but does she understand sea war? Hitler can bomb our cities and factories and ships, but we can bomb his factories and ports and ships in return. . . . The resolution of our people is very high . . . To conquer England Hitler has either to starve us out, or land and maintain an army there sufficiently large to occupy our country."

While declaring Great Britain is proud of her West Indian possessions, which are older than the United States, the ambassador gave this assurance: "If there was any question of these islands falling into enemy hands or becoming a menace to your security, we should be the first to want to make some arrangement which would insure your security."

Tunney Urges Ban Upon 'Isms'

New York, July 22.—Gene Tunney, former heavyweight champion, who has been campaigning against subversive movements among the youth of America, told members of the American Legion today that both of the major political parties "should come out with their determination to pass an act outlawing communism, nazism and fascism because they are agencies of foreign governments and ideologies."

Tunney said he was convinced that the American Youth Congress was in the hands of Communists.

Germans Call British Raids Peace Answer

Bombings Stepped Up Since Hitler Offer, Says Berlin Press

By the Associated Press

Berlin, July 22.—The German press reported tonight that British air raids have greatly increased since last Friday, when Adolf Hitler offered peace, and showed in advance what Prime Minister Churchill's reply would be.

Informal opinion in Berlin political circles was that today's address by Lord Halifax, British foreign secretary, "changed nothing, and gives no reason to hope that Hitler's peace offer found any response in British official quarters."

The general disposition in Berlin seemed to be to wait until tomorrow to see what Churchill, himself, has to say to the House of Commons.

Authorized circles said that reply would tell the tale for Britain—that Hitler is holding back his Nazi thunderbolt only in expectation that some official reply may be forthcoming from Britain to his suggestions for peace.

D. N. B., official German news agency, reported that since the Fuehrer made his "generous offer" England has fired back increased air raids, which "show Churchill wants to demonstrate to the German people what he regards as a proper answer."

The news agency said numerous residential districts were spattered with explosives and civilians killed. It added that although visibility was good the raiders dropped flares to pick out their targets.

"He Wants to Be Elected"

By the Associated Press

The Frankfurter Zeitung declared editorially that President Roosevelt is "to a gigantic extent responsible" for British unreceptiveness. The editorial was broadcast by the German radio.

The editorial said that "Roosevelt, now that he wants to be elected, admits that he has systematically agitated for years against national socialism."

The United States, it said, "for seven years . . . nourished many illusions among those whose belief in active help from America has been their strongest hope, France until the day of her final collapse, England still today."

The German high command claimed continuing air attacks had resulted in the sinking of a tanker and four merchant ships and caused great damage to English ports, air fields, factories and oil-storage depots.

Nazis Charge Allies Plotted To Mine Danube

By the Associated Press

Berlin, July 22.—The foreign office accused the Allies tonight of a plan—which it said was thwarted last spring—to block Rumanian exports to Germany by the Danube River.

Basis of the allegation was a summary of purported documents to be published tomorrow. They charge that before the French collapse:

France drafted plans to destroy Rumanian oil wells.

France planned to invade Belgium last spring.

French army men favored aggressive action against Germany through the Balkans.

The papers are the latest of a series on Allied war plans which the Germans said were seized in France.

Destruction of Rumania's petroleum industry was planned by the French Embassy in Bucharest in collaboration with the British, the German radio asserted.

Last April, the Nazis said, about 12 barges, accompanied by British speed launches, were discovered on the Danube with a cargo of revolvers, mines, depth charges and several thousand cases of dynamite.

Another document was described as a telegram from the French Ambassador in Rumania to Paris, suggesting interruption of traffic between Germany and Rumania on the Danube River.

This would be fully as important as destruction of the oil fields, the telegram was quoted, and the last sentence published by the German foreign office read:

"I am in position to carry out necessary negotiations."

The documents, it was said, showed that the decision to invade Belgium was made April 9 by the French war committee and President Albert Lebrun, with agreement "first to try to obtain Belgium's consent."

The French, they charged, also reinforced Gen. Mexine Weygand's Near East army last spring after he had urged aggressive action in the Balkans through Thrace and Macedonia.

Nazi Plane Bombed and Sank Panamanian Steamer Off Spain With Heavy Loss of Life, British Charge

By the United Press

London, July 22.—An authoritative British statement tonight claimed that a German airplane had sunk the Panama steamship Frossoula, 250 miles northwest of Cape Finisterre, at the northwest tip of Spain.

It was feared there was a heavy loss of life.

(The Maritime Association of the Port of New York said that the Frossoula was a Greek vessel of 1,282 tons gross operating under Panamian registry. Her crew was estimated normally at 28.)

(Authorized German quarters said they knew nothing about the Frossoula and professed skepticism over the authenticity of the story, asserting that "it sounds too suspiciously like the London ministry of information.")

The British statement said:

"Germany's methods of waging war at sea led to the loss of a ship that belonged to one of the American republics, with, it is feared, a heavy loss of life.

"The Frossoula's last port of call was Barcelona. At 8:30 o'clock on the evening of July 15, the ship was attacked by a German aircraft and was bombed and sunk.

"Eighteen of her crew left in two boats, one under command of the captain of the Frossoula, the other in charge of the chief officer.

"Nothing more has been heard of the captain's boat.

"Those in the chief officer's boat suffered terrible hardships. The Frossoula was nearly 250 miles northwest of Cape Finisterre when attacked, and the weather was very bad.

"Men were washed overboard from the lifeboat and others died of exposure. After four days, the boat and survivors reached a British port.

"There were only three men alive, the chief officer, a Portuguese, and the second engineer and one sailor, both of whom were Greeks."

Roscoe Turner Hurt in Collision

Indianapolis, July 22 (AP).—Col. Roscoe Turner, famed speed aviator, his secretary and two other persons were injured severely in an automobile collision here last night. Col. Turner, driving one of the motor cars, received a fractured pelvis. Miss Marian Allyne, his secretary, received a fractured left collarbone, cuts and bruises.

Graydon Hubbard, of Elwood, State professional trapshooting champion and driver of the other vehicle, suffered internal injuries, and Miss Helen Carson, of Terre Haute, a passenger in Hubbard's automobile, received a broken right arm and head contusions.

Seaman Admits Drug Smuggling

San Francisco, July 22 (AP).—A Japanese seaman pleaded guilty to a smuggling charge today as Narcotics Department agents looked further into the operations of an extensive smuggling ring they said was exposed by an American woman.

Yoshitomo Wada, 42, pleaded guilty before United States Commissioner E. E. Williams. His bail was set at $25,000. Al Zirpoli, assistant United States attorney, said the evidence would be presented to the Federal grand jury next week for indictment, a step necessary despite the guilty plea.

Stokowski Affords Fillip to Society

Washington Coming Into Its Own In the World of Art, Which Keeps Notables in Hot City to Play Host

By Carolyn Bell.

LEOPOLD STOKOWSKI, that beglamoured gentleman of the symphony world, has brought a much-needed fillip to society, if but for a day.

Long a stepchild in the arts, Washington is finally coming into its own. With celebrities a dime a dozen these hot days, social lights are finding themselves in a difficult spot, i. e., whether to dash off to cooler climes or remain and fete the headline-makers. Some lucky persons, such as Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, can have their cake and eat it, too. Technically in Newport until November, Mrs. Howe, whose passion for music is not unknown, has a habit of dashing down for important occasions. She is expected to attend Stokowski's performance at the Watergate.

Although Mr. Stokowski, who arrives this morning, is about as elusive as Garbo, it is expected that he will stop with Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss at Dumbarton Oaks. The peaceful grounds of this Georgetown residence should prove relaxing to the white-maned conductor after his workout in Atlantic City. The Blisses will probably gather in a congenial group of music lovers this evening following the symphony to meet the lion of the evening.

With tickets at a premium, the audience at the Watergate will be well studded with society figures. Any number of people have planned "quickie" parties to precede the concert. Mrs. Arthur Woods will gather in a group this evening for drinks and sandwiches before the affair. Her guest of honor will be Susan Ertz, the novelist, who is visiting Mrs. Woods for a week. Mrs. Woods, incidentally, hopes to get off on a trip by August. To date she is up to her elbows in war-relief work. The main drawback seems to be maintaining satisfactory communications with her aunt, Miss Anne Morgan, who is in France on a trip of mercy.

Kindlers to Return From Rehoboth

Expected up from Rehoboth Beach, Del., where they went over the week-end for some much needed relaxation, are the conductor of National Symphony Orchestra and Mrs. Hans Kindler. Many South American diplomats will be in the audience this evening, for Mr. Stokowski and his All-American Youth Orchestra will leave shortly for a good-will tour of South America.

Still on the subject of the arts: Plans are well underway for an exhibit of contemporary Argentine art in Newport on August 1. Senator Theodore Green is one of the patrons, as are Governor and Mrs. William H. Vanderbilt.

The paintings—and other art work—are those that were on display at the Argentine pavilion at the World's Fair last year. When the building was dismantled, Robert Woods Bliss, former Ambassador to the Argentine, conceived the idea of exhibiting the work in various spots. Some months ago the work was shown in Richmond with such success that they decided to continue. The work represents a cross section of Argentine art, but, of course, as in any exhibit, many outstanding painters have been left out.

Berkshire Festival Held in August

The Ambassador of the Argentine and Senora de Espil, now in Havana, have leased a house at Hot Springs, Va., which they plan to occupy for the remainder of the summer season upon their return from Cuba.

Back to music again: The Berkshire Festival, held annually near Stockbridge, Mass., in August, will attract many of the music-loving populace of Washington. Many who are already in the New England section for the summer will also attend. Miss Alice Clapp, who always takes a box for the duration of the festival, will do so again this season. She will have several Washington guests with her. At present she is in her summer cottage on Lake Chatauqua, N. Y.

Kitchen and Parlor Blend for Maidless Home

This living-kitchen on exhibition in the America at Home Building of the World's Fair is creating wide interest. The designer is Allmon Fordyce, architect. He has used cypress wood panelling for the room and developed many ingenious and practical devices for preparing and serving. The built-in sofa is covered in a brilliant herringbone stripe, while the chairs in the fireplace corner of the room, floored in natural brick, are in plain stripes. Blues and greens against white are the colorings for these stripes

Your Figure, Madame!

Full Mirror Is Big Help In Exercising

By Ida Jean Kain

YOU don't really see yourself when you look in the mirror, so they say. What you see is a composite: one part what you really are, one part what you expect to see and the third what you wish you saw! It seems to be a case of wishful looking!

When you stand before the mirror you probably draw yourself up to your full regal height with head high and your middle pulled slim and think, "Not bad!" And you get the impression that you keep right on looking that way.

Whenever we hear of an actress having a room completely paneled with mirrors we say she's welcome to it—we wouldn't stand it! But at that it might have an advantage. You would be able to see yourself in your unguarded moments and from every angle.

See Yourself in Action

All the de luxe beauty dealers are going in for mirror paneling in their exercise salons. You can't turn around without meeting yourself—and perhaps getting such an inferiority complex that you are willing to pay any price for improvements. Besides, when you see yourself in action you are willing to work harder and you can watch your exercise posture and do the exercises more accurately.

Use your full-length mirror while exercising—if you have two mirrors that can be adjusted to give a front and rear view simultaneously, so much the better. Here are some exercises that give better results if you can supervise yourself while doing them:

POSITION: Standing erect, barefoot and with feet parallel. Stand sideways to your mirror.

MOVEMENT: With the back as straight as you can keep it, tummy pulled up, chest lifted and chin level, and with the heels on the floor, bend the knees and slowly go down as far as you can without losing your balance or letting heels come off the floor. Keep that back straight! Then, still slowly, come up to standing position. That exercise is not as easy as it sounds, but it is good discipline for the muscles that need it. Repeat three times, very slowly, and later nine times. Warning: Don't try it nine times to start with!

POSITION: Still standing sideways to mirror, arms straight out at sides, shoulder level.

Allmon Fordyce Stops Crowds Again at Fair With New Exhibit

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

ALLMON FORDYCE, who was associated with Normal Bel Geddes as architect of the famous Futurama that has stopped the crowds at the World's Fair, has turned his hand in the new Fair to an entirely different type of exhibit. This, too, has been stopping the crowds. It is a living-kitchen suggesting a new arrangement for the living spaces in the home of average means where the housewife doesn't have a maid.

An attempt is made to recapture some of the old geniality of the big kitchen that was once the center of household life. Work in this kitchen was a sociable affair, with the family sitting around of an evening and with all the household activities converging here.

Shelf Partition Unit

Naturally, with new types of equipment, an exact replica of this old arrangement would not be practical, but Fordyce presents his living-kitchen layout as a contemporary interpretation of the same idea. He concentrates the working units of the kitchen in one end with a shelf partition to separate it from the living quarters. This shelf partition is open and therefore can be reached from both sides. The glassware kept on these shelves is decorative and is easily in reach.

The living corner of the room centers in a fireplace that is paved with natural brick, which gives it a friendly mood, while the floor of the rest of the room is covered with a terra cotta colored linoleum. The walls of the entire room except the brick fireplace breast are panelled in cypress. A broad window alcove has built-in bench upholstered in a brilliant modern striped fabric.

Expanding Dining Room

Here the dining table is placed with expanding facilities, enabling anywhere from 6 to 14 to be seated at mealtime. This table is on wheels and can be set conveniently in reach of the kitchen corner, then rolled over to its dining position.

Not only does this planning provide a sociable place for a woman to do her work without being off by herself in the back of the house, but it suggests pleasant types of entertaining for gourmets who like to cook and entertain in the kitchen. It is expected, from the interest this living-kitchen is eliciting in the America at Home Exhibition of the World's Fair, that it will have great influence on the planning of small-sized American homes during the coming year.

A WOMAN'S

WASHINGTON

By JEAN BROWNELL

IF YOU'RE a law-abiding dog owner, you have had dealings with Hattie F. Small. She works in the District tax collector's office, handling dog licenses. She gave out 26,000 last year and expects to sell even more in 1940-41. She's made dog licenses more profitable to the District than ever before. The secret of her success, she thinks, is that she never tells applicants who come in toward the end of the fiscal year that they'll have to buy a second tag soon. The law is that the purchaser of a dog must also buy a license, even if it's the last week in June.

Mrs. Small

Mrs. Small has tagged many White House dogs. This year, however, tags No. 1 and No. 2 went to Steve Early for his own pets. The Roosevelts have had no dogs since the time when a White House guest was bitten. (That episode allegedly gave rise, you remember, to Mrs. Roosevelt's classic line: "That settles it; we must keep mercurochrome in this room.")

Representative Hatton Sumner once asked Mrs. Small in fun for a discount, said he had a bob-tailed dog. She nipped that plan by saying she even charges the full $2 for three-legged animals. She is fond of dogs and regrets that living in an apartment prevents her from selling herself a license.

FASHION NOTES—The new shoes have become almost as serious cause for domestic dissension as the new hats But not so in the Henry Grattan Doyle household. Dean Doyle, although reputed to be the conservative member of the family, likes wedgies and has persuaded his wife to wear them . . . Numerous informants have reported seeing a beauteous Chinese girl around town, clad in a native costume, of suptuous silk—and wearing a pair of brown and white wedgies.

When your mother is from Boston and your father straight from Foggy Bottom (and proud of it), your speech would be a poser even for radio's accent-detective. Four-year-old Nancy Folliard, daughter of The Post's Eddie Folliard, takes after both parents. She comes out with statements like this: "I'm going to wash my haid in the bawthtub."

REALTY NOTE—A young couple unversed in the eccentricities of Washington apartments found an attractively funished place priced so modestly that they paid a month's rent on the spot and moved right in. After their first meal in their new home they noticed one lack which may have accounted for the low rent. The tiny kitchenette, apparently an afterthought when the building was converted into apartments, lacked a sink, and the bride did her first year's dishwashing in the bathtub.

A young mother was flattered when her husband's boss' wife called on her at the hospital with a bouquet of garden flowers. Her joy changed to jitters almost immediately, however, for she discovered a host of black ants leaving the flowers and crawling into bed with her. The next half hour was a full one; she had to fight off the ants, at the same time keep up a conversation with her caller, and, hardest of all, tell the woman how much she was enjoying the flowers.

Orange Juice Is Good Summer Health Insurance

NUMBER ONE drink for many persons is a tall glass of chilled orange juice. And it doesn't need to be just chilled juice poured into an uninteresting glass either. I learned new things about orange juice at an Orange Juice get-together recently, when Miss Essie L. Elliot, director of home economics, California Fruit Growers Association, entertained at the Mayflower Hotel.

Miss Elliot says that orange juice is not only cold to the taste, but is cooling to the body, since vitamin C in which oranges abound actually mitigates the effects of heat. Only receptly scientists discovered that exposure to high temperatures caused a 50 per cent loss in vitamin C from the body tissue—and lowered vitamin C reserves go hand-in-hand with the tired feeling we get when the weather is so hot. So a glass of orange juice—or several glasses—is good summer health insurance.

When I asked Miss Elliot how many oranges are marketed yearly, she said, "approximately 200,000,000 boxes." That's a lot of oranges but there are many delicious ways to use them. One of them is the drink that Miss Elliot served at her party—Hollywood Parade. It is very simple to assemble. Here are the directions:

Hollywood Parade

Into a shaker put equal parts of orange ice, orange juice and orange ice cream. Shake together vigorously. Charged water may be added if desired. Serve in tall frosted glass, decorated with a sprig of mint.

There are many more summer delights made with oranges. Orange sherbet may be used to make summer meals more refreshing, as it can be used as an accompaniment for the meat course; the topping for a fruit cup of fresh summer fruits; served for dessert; as a float for orangeade, lemonade and fruit punch. The following recipe is one of Miss Elliot's for making an orange sherbet of velvety texture.

Orange Sherbet

Boil 1½ cups sugar and 1 cup water together for 5 minutes. Add slowly to 2 stiffly beaten egg whites. Add 2 cups orange juice and 3 tablespoons lemon juice. Pour into freezing tray and set cold control at fast freezing. Freeze stiff and beat or stir thoroughly. Return to freezing compartment and finish freezing. Makes about 1 quart.

Mary Haworth's Mail

On Mutual Friend's Recommendation, Girl Looks Up Man, Who Beaus Her One Evening and Never Calls Again; He Ignores Her Notes; What to Do Next?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I think this story should be told from beginning to end if you are to help me. Two years ago I met a man in Chicago who has a cousin who is a lawyer in New York. He is at the top of his profession, although in his early thirties. He had been married to a very wealthy girl who loved frivolity, but because he was hard working and serious minded, it didn't work out; so they were divorced.

The Chicagoan told me to look this man up if I were ever in New York. He recommended him highly, saying that of all the men he knew, his character was the most admirable. I am 32, and after much development and care, I have a lovely figure, charming personality and excellent taste in clothes. My face isn't so bad to look at, either. My specialty is music and I play the piano well. We have a nice home.

Last summer I was in New York and I telephoned this lawyer. He was out of town and his secretary took the message. Much to my surprise, the day I arrived back home, the lawyer called me, saying he was in Washington and the message had been relayed from his office. He said he was booked up for this stay, but would see me when he came back, in about a week. Two weeks later he called, but I wasn't home. This was in August.

In November he telephoned again, asking me to meet him downtown for dinner. I accepted without much hesitation. But my father, on hearing about it, insisted I should have the man call for me at my home. I called back at his hotel, but he was out, so I met him per arrangement, explaining why I had tried to reach him.

I wasn't much impressed on first meeting him. He seemed just average looking, not at all distinguished. He said we were to join friends of his for dinner at another hotel, and that he had to call California on business. On the way to meet his friends, we talked about ourselves and when he heard of my interest in music, he said he had the greatest respect for persons who are musically inclined. (Incidentally, he inquired where I lived, and seemed rather worried at the thought of having to drive so far out at the end of the date, as he was pretty tired already.) He asked me, "Do you get up to New York frequently?" I said, without thinking, "Very seldom."

Only after his telephone call, which took an hour and a half, we had dinner. His friends were lovely to me. He looked exhausted and I asked him if he thought it worth while to work so hard. (I really meant it.) He gasped at the question. After dinner I went home alone in a cab (for which he paid) without asking him to call. This was my first mistake. But he had told me that when he came to Washington he was drained of vitality by evening and it didn't seem likely I would hear from him again. As I drove off he looked miserable and I felt the same—because thinking that he was a wonderful man and I would never see him again.

Later, I planned to be in New York at Christmas, and on the advice of a friend I wrote him a note early in December, saying that I was coming and would look him up. That was my second mistake. I got no response. When I reached New York, I called him and he seemed very happy to hear me, but he said he was going away over the week-end for a rest, and he knew I would understand. I inquired about his health and he gasped again. He said on his next visit to Washington he would surely call me. I think he really meant it, but I made another mistake.

I was staying in New York for a week and I was dying to see him. So on the advice of another friend I wrote him a note, explaining the length of my stay and saying that in case he couldn't see me while I was there, I would be looking forward to seeing him in Washington. There was no acknowledgement.

Two months ago I wrote him another note, asking how he was and saying that I liked him because of his character and great interest in music. There was no response to this, and I haven't heard from him since Christmas. I have been thinking of sending him a note saying I will be in New York on a certain date, stopping at a certain hotel, and that it would be nice to see him. This might lead him to call me the next time he is in Washington—as I don't expect to telephone him when I go to New York.

Do you think this is a wise step to take? If you have a better suggestion, please let me know. I will greatly appreciate a prompt reply. Sincerely,
ANN MARIE.

Man Takes Flight When Woman Grabs

DEAR ANN MARIE: One thing is certain—these friends of yours who have been advising you to send wheedling "notes" to the man don't belong to the male sex. Any man of any experience in affairs of the heart would have warned you solemnly (if you had asked his opinion): "Don't grab. Leave the bird alone. He'll find his way back to your doorstep of his own accord, if he is at all interested in developing the acquaintance. By giving chase you will only be killing whatever sparks of speculative curiosity he may feel about you."

By your tense communicativeness (I am sorry to say), you have already told the chap, without his asking, that you are to be classified as a beauless, romance-hungry, man-hunting spinster; ready to clamp down on his neck like a veritable Old Man of the Sea, if given a Chinaman's chance. However, it it would be idle to bog down in remorse over your "mistakes" of finesse.

It has been said there are two things we should never worry about: (1) the things we can help and (2) the things we can't help. And I believe, frankly, that there never were the "makings" of a romance in the encounter. I think, honestly, that so far as the man is concerned, you just failed to "click," either at first glance or in subsequent conversation.

A man is never so exhausted by professional strain that he cannot, and does not, quicken into some show of vitality if fate throws him in the company of an attractive woman who speaks his language, of the mind or heart. From the very moment your dinner companion began to worry about the long nocturnal drive out to where you live, events have consistently proved that you two don't speak each other's language, on any front. If you did (or if he thought you did), he would have welcomed, rather than dreaded, any set-up which gave him sound reason to linger alone with you.

So the most constructive advice I have to give you is to forget about him. Check him off your list of possible beaux. But you may, if you like, tuck this secret hope in the back of your mind—for what it may prove to be worth: Now that he has grown accustomed to your plaintive little attentions, he may actually miss them if they no longer show up.

If he emerges from professional preoccupations one day, to reflect, "By George, I haven't heard from Ann Marie Whoosis for nearly a year; I wonder what's happened; I wonder if she's married"—on that day he may think to call you for a change. And then you will have that opportunity you so much want today—of making another try for his friendship, without putting yourself out on the end of a limb.

If that chance ever comes, be a little more elusive, negative and resistant. Let him do the heavy work of promoting meetings, while you devote your talents to being diverting and stimulating, in an essentially impersonal way. M. H.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

New Worlds to Conquer

TWO NEW campaigns were launched yesterday by Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey, famous reformer. One was an anti-pompadour drive, the other a crusade in behalf of patriotic gadgets.

Mrs. DeGoofey

Recently returned from the Democratic convention at Chicago, the aggressive president of the Do Something About It League announced she would devote her efforts to strictly feminine proclems for a while.

"I am through with politics for the time being," she said, "except for classifying and filing the addenda to my private collection of oratorical brumides. I added extensively to my collection at both conventions—but more of that later. More urgent matters demand my attention.

"Now, I have just learned that the hair stylists are trying to put one over on me and I am rallying all my forces to fight the return of the pompadour, which is the most artificial and unbecoming coiffure style ever devised for woman."

"But Mrs. DeGoofey," interrupted a representative of the New Republic, "do you not wear a pompadour yourself?"

Pompadours Hard On Husbands

"Only a modified one," was the reply, "and besides, I am the type that can get away with it. But the majority of women can't.

Now, if this trend continues we will soon have women walking around with those horrible sausage rolls of the 90's on their heads, and, what is worse, all those disgusting 'rat' and 'mice' devices with ornament bureaus every night and drive husbands into the arms of clipped-headed Amazons.

"The long glamour bob trailing in the soup has been bad enough, but the pompadour is even worse, particularly when a baby bonnet is perched back of it. Just imagine the bald eagle and Stone Mountain effects we will have to look at this fall."

The reformer declared she would circulate among all the glamour men of the Nation a petition protesting against the pompadour. At the same time she said she would actively promote the wearing by women of more conspicuous patriotic gadgets.

"Whenever I can in my reforms," said Mrs. DeGoofey, "I like to contribute to the happiness of women and the gayety of men. Now, in the new patriotic geegaws I see a splendid opportunity for women to get more attention from men. This patriotic dress campaign should be a life saver to women, especially during these dog days when men are a little tired, moody, indifferent and—shall I say?—difficult.

Touches That Make Men Bold

"Now, if you will pardon a personal reference, let me say that since I have donned my Liberty Bell hat I have been stared at wherever I have gone and have even been followed by men who were trying to press their attentions on me. And that sort of thing is not only very reassuring to a woman, but gives her unlimited opportunity for conversation afterward.

"I expect soon to introduce on the market Liberty Bell earrings with sound effects. And earrings, as the stylists say, are going to be very important this fall. I shall also disperse miniature stuffed eagles to be worn on the shoulders, on the lapel or on the hat, also slave bracelets consisting of miniature Bunker Hill monuments strung together, and of course I shall push patriotic designs in tints for the fingernails."

"But will women not be actuated entirely by exhibitionism in the wearing of such gadgets?" asked a representative of the Congressional Digest.

"Oh, no, indeed!" was the reply. "Their primary motive will be patriotism. Moreover, it will be a patriotism that won't include any disagreeable duties, such as knitting, sewing, selling tickets for benefits or even studying the issues of the day. You see, the great beauty of my plan is that you can—provided you are properly attired—sit on the porch and rock—and still be patriotic!"

Liquid Stops Runs in Hosiery

To lengthen the life of your silk or Nylon hosiery, there has been manufactured a liquid material that you squeeze on to the hose from a tube. This liquid may be applied to snags and to prevent garter runs. To prevent runs from heel and toe, apply on even line just above heel or toe where runs occurs.

This nonstop material will not wash out of hose, and it does not leave black marks, but if you want to remove it from hose, apply cleaning fluid. It takes but one drop, ¼ inch below or above the end of the run, or around snags or small holes, to do the work. All broken threats should be caught with the nonstop. It should then be rubbed in lightly with the neck of the tube.

D. C. Suffrage Bill Demanded This Session

why not bring it out here and vote on it and not make it a so-called partisan matter.

"Why not come in here and vote it out? I am sure that Republicans in great numbers will join the gentleman, and it will not be a partisan matter. Let us take the partisanship out of the question entirely."

Randolph replied that he was aware that Senator Capper (Republican) of Kansas, has for years urged suffrage for the District.

He said he "hailed with enthusiasm" the action of the Democratic Party in placing the suffrage plank in the platform "for the first time in the history of the United States." He expressed regret that the Republicans hadn't done likewise, as the issue is nonpartisan.

Opinions on Subject Differ

"I know there are many of you who are conscientiously against the extenion of the privilege and the responsibility of voting rights to the men and the women who reside in our National Capital," he said. "I know full well there is a difference of opinion on this subject."

Randolph admitted there may have been an excuse for depriving District residents of the franchise a generation ago, when the Capital was made up of Federal employes who had come here from the States, and tradesmen who had moved in to serve them.

"But during the last 21 years or more sons and daughters have been born to the men and women who came here and they are now of voting age, he added.

"They cannot under any legal means or any stretch of the imagination establish a boan fide voting residence in any State in this union.

Mundt Wants Details

"Why should these young men and women, as they become 21 years of age, be kept from voting for a President of the United States just as do the young men and women in the States of Kansas or Illinois, or in my own State of West Virginia?"

Asked by Representative Mundt (Republican), of South Dakota, to explain "just what is contemplated by the plank in the Democratic platform, Randolph said:

"The plank simply states 'We also favor the extension of the right of suffrage to the people of the District of Columbia.' We believe that those who are interested in the subject matter in this Congress will arrive at a legislative vehicle we can use to bring about a partial suffrage, if not a complete suffrage, for the District of Columbia.

"I believe it is only fair to say that in my discussions over the last few years with members of this body I have found many more of them in favor of giving a vote for President to residents of the District than for any other part of the national representation or suffrage program."

Praise for Randolph

Randolph was praised by Representative Leavy (Democrat), of Washington, for his part in getting the suffrage plank in the Democratic platform. Leavy replied to the Republican suggestions of prompt action with the observation that had the Philadelphia convention adopted a similar plank "we would have been doubly sure of enacting such legislation before we adjourn."

Representative O'Brien (Republican), of New York, commented that many men and women "would be glad to live in the District of Columbia if they could only exercise the privilege the distinguished gentleman has been promoting for several years," and these persons "could make a very valuable contribution spiritually, as well as physically, morall yand intellectually, to the affairs of the District of Columbia."

18 Democrat Senators May Vote for Willkie

understood independent voters were volunteering their services, and added:

"Count me in that group, for I offer my services in any way which will be useful to you.

Willkie replied to Hanes and Douglas by suggesting that they "commence in your own way the organization of Democrats and Independents of like belief."

In the same connection, leaders in both parties yesterday were watching for the outcome of the meeting of "Jeffersonian Democrats," called for Thursday at Chicago by former Senator James A. Reed, of Missouri, to map opposition to continuation of the New Deal.

Other Democrats, who had previously switched to the Willkie camp since Mr. Roosevelt early on Friday embarked on the first third-term campaign in history, include Senator Edward R. Burke, of Nebraska; Irvin S. Cobb, the writer; Vance C. McCormick, Democratic national chairman in the 1916 campaign, and Stephen F. Chadwick, last year's commander of the American Legion.

Senator Ellison D. Smith, of South Carolina, has said that he is opposed to a third term but will not vote Republican.

Many of the Democratic Senators who are opposed to the reelection of Mr. Roosevelt again are known to have conferred with Senator Burke since the Nebraskan announced his own bolt. None of them would comment for the record yesterday, obviously because of political situations in their home States, but there was apparent an intention to give no material support to the effort against the two-term tradition.

Such Democratic figures, they commented privately, as Vice President Garner and National Chairman James A. Farley, have been replaced in the guiding councils of the party by Mayor Ed Kelly of Chicago; Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City, Secretary of Commerce Hopkins and Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, the Vice Presidential nominee whose selection for the ticket post by President Roosevelt caused a turmoil of convention floor opposition.

The comment came as Garner was departing from Washington amid speculation by many that he would not come back to the Capitol where he has served nearly two score years, and as Farley, who directed Mr. Roosevelt's first campaign for nomination and both his election campaigns, was starting the task of clearing out his desk in New York for his successor as National Chairman.

New Opposition Move

It was reported that a movement was on foot in the Senate to revive the Democratic opposition that finally blocked the President's court reorganization proposal and center its opposition on the third term. Such a movement would avoid affiliation with the "Jeffersonian Democrats" whose attack has been aimed at most of the New Deal acts and philosophy though currently directed against a third election for Mr. Roosevelt. There has been discussion of Senator Burke leading those early court plan opponents who feel similarly on the reelection issue.

Senator Burke said last night he had not decided whether to attend the Chicago meeting called by Reed, but may go as an observer. He said he had become convinced there would be an active and vigorous fight by some of his Democratic colleagues against another four-year period for the Administration.

Willkie "has a good chance of winning Texas," Jack Tillery, of Long View, Tex., a delegate to the Democratic National Convention, told Burke yesterday, as the Texan offered to work for Willkie's election rather than suport Mr. Roosevelt again.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, Democratic Vice Presidential candidate, faces "tough-going" in Texas, Tillery said.

Acceptance Speech August 17

Colorado Springs, Colo., July 22 (AP).—Wendell L. Willkie announced today he would make his Elwood, Ind., address accepting the Republican Presidential nomination on August 17.

Lunches With Halleck

Willkie lunched with a group which included Representative Charles Halleck (Republican), of Indiana, who is handling arrangements for the Elwood meeting. In Elwood, Willkie plans a short preliminary talk from the steps of the high school, a school from which he was twice dismissed.

The formal address will be made at the 50-acre Calloway Park. "When I was a boy," Willkie said, "it was called Joe De Horty's woods. I earned 75 cents a week driving cows through the woods. The old swimming hole was there."

Halleck said it was probable that the address would be made in the afternoon. The Indiana Representative said he expected a "tremendous" crowd.

Garner May Not Serve Out Term

in the Vice President's office calling on a friendly group of lawmakers to "strike another blow for liberty."

At the Washington Hotel, where the Garners have lived the last seven years, clerks reported that the couple had "checked out," but continued to hold their apartment.

"I'm just going down home to vote and do a little hunting and fishing," the Vice President said yesterday as he paced alongside the waiting train.

The man who is credited with healing the 1937 Supreme Court breach in his party, but whose personal ambitions to be President foundered under the third-term drive, was in a jovial mood.

"Have any of you boys ever worn these shirts with the short sleeves and the long tails that come down below your knees?" he asked reporters.

"'Happy' Chandler gave me two of them and I am to wear them as soon as I get home. 'Happy' is a Senator, you know, and I always do what the Senators say. They are my bosses."

But when politics—his specialty—were mentioned, the Vice President maintained a silence that has made him in recent years almost legendary, a silence that he did not break even while New Deal forces were drafting President Roosevelt for a third term, which the Texan opposed, and were installing Henry Wallace as a candidate for his job of Vice President.

"Now that you are leaving town, don't you think it would be safe to say what you think of the Chicago convention?" a reporter asked.

The Vice President smiled a negative answer.

Garner, twice President Roosevelt's running mate, was headed for the Texas cattle country where he began as a cowhand the hard working life that finally placed him in the second highest office in the land.

Promoted from a county judgeship to Congress in 1902, Garner became leader of the Democratic opposition in the twenties and then Speaker of the House on December 7, 1931. Now regarded as a "shellback" conservative by New Dealers, Garner was once reputed to be a flaming liberal.

Amonk those who stopped in to say good-by to Garner yesterday was Zeke Bonura, first baseman for the Washington team who has just been sold to the Chicago Cubs.

"It's a pleasure to meet any former Senator," Garner said to Bonura.

Senator George Norris, veteran Independent and an original third-termer, stopped by to bid farewell. The Vice President recalled that he and Norris were elected to Congress at the same time, 1902.

The only near-political comment that Garner permitted himself was a glowing indorsement of Bascom Timmons, correspondent for Texas newspapers, whose joke candidacy for the Vice Presidency reached the convention floor in Chicago and even netted him a vote. Garner said he thought Timmons made a fine candidate.

D. C. Hospital Charges Face Probe

Billed for Services He Never Received, Says Shafer, Launching Inquiry

A Congressional investigation of the room rates and fees charged patients by Washington's private hospitals will be demanded by Representative Shafer (Republican), of Michigan, if answers to a query sent all hospitals are not forthcoming and satisfactory.

Shafer, who is suffering from an injured back as a result of an automobile accident last spring, said his one-man inquiry was inspired by his own recent experience in one of the larger downtown hospitals and by complaints that have come to his office.

"If a member of Congress is treated as badly as I was," he commented, "the treatment given poor people must be terrible."

Shafer is a member of the subcommittee on public health, hospitals and charities of the House District Committee.

Claims Overcharges

When he went to the local hospital to have his cast changed, he was charged a much higher price than had been agreed upon for his room, was billed for services he did not receive, and was charged a day and a half room rent because he overstayed a full day by a few hours, he claims.

Shafer thereupon decided to write to the superintendents of all local hospitals and to ask them for detailed information as to their rates, the extent of contributions they received from the Community Chest and other charitable agencies, the proportion of free charitable services they perform, and the like.

Although the letters were sent out 11 days ago, only one reply has been received. It disclosed, among other things, that the laboratory fee was $2 under that charged him by the hospital to which he went.

"I was asked some time ago by several physicians to make an investigation of the hospitals here," he recalled, "but I was too busy and thought that perhaps their complaints were unjustified.

Received Apology

"I was told that unless a doctor is a member of the staff even he gets pushed around by the hospitals."

Shafer disclosed that after he had been compelled to take a much higher priced room than had been promised him, the superintendent appeared and apologized, with the explanation that they didn't understand he was a member of Congress.

"Does that make any difference?" Shafer inquired.

The superintendent replied that he realized Shafer was a member of the hospital committee and consequently had been interested in the welfare of local hospitals, the Congressman reported.

Shafer said he "shuddered to think what happens to a patient who has neither the courage nor the position to resist some of the charges imposed on a patient." In his own case, he forced the hospital to eliminate charges for services he had never received, he said.

Capital News In Brief

Elder Michaux Urges Prayers for Roosevelt

Elder Lightfoot Solomon Michaux, pastor of the Radio Church of God at 1712 R street northwest, yesterday sent to The Post the following which he said was sent to President Roosevelt in a telegram Sunday night:

"I wish to inform you that after sitting in the stadium at Chicago last Wednesday and Thursday while the Democratic National Convention wa. held, listening to the delegates as they cast the votes that renominated you as the choice of the Democratic Party for the third term to be President of the United States, and also to your acceptance speech in which you gave your reason for accepting, I was moved to call the seven churches over which I am overseer in special prayer to God for your health and strength.

"And also that God might give you a light heart while you carry the responsibility of guiding a great Nation of Christian people through the worst crisis the world has ever known.

"Here in Washington, D. C., 2030 Georgia avenue, several hundred have gathered to pray all night for you and wife. We trust that other churches will follow the example.

"Your friend in the service of Christ and humanity, Elder Lightfoot Solomon Michaux."

Hard Work, No Pay For Safe Burglars

Burglars who carried a 500-pound safe from the first floor to the basement of the Evarts Cafe at 522 Thirteenth street early yesterday morning were foiled when they were unable to open the inner compartment after drilling the outer door. The thieves had to be content with about $10 in change taken from a cigarette vending machine in the cafe.

Nurse Denied Claim On Kane Estate

Judge Nathan Cayton of the Municipal Court yesterday rejected the claim of Frieda Friedrich, nurse, of 2207 H street northwest, to $294 from the estate of Stephen H. Kane.

Mr. Kane, retired contractor, who died in July, 1938, left Miss Friedrich $2,000 of his $47,000 estate. She claimed she left another position to care for him six weeks before he died, upon his agreement to pay for her services. The executors refused to pay her, because she lacked a written contract or other evidence of debt.

In the regular order such suits are tried in the District Court, which would have taken 15 months. By agreement, the dispute was referred to the judge of the Small Claims Branch of the Municipal Court for arbitration, which took only a week.

All-U. S. Youth Orchestra Due Here Today

Leopold Stokowski's All-American Youth Orchestra will arrive 100 strong at Union Station today at 9:49 a. m. for its public debut as a symphony orchestra in a Water Gate concert scheduled for 8 p. m.

Selected by Stokowski from hundreds of youths in auditions throughout the country, the orchestra is hailed as "the equal of any symphony orchestra anywhere."

It will make a goodwill tour of South America, embarking, according to present plans, from New York Thursday night after a concert at the Lewisohn Stadium.

The orchestra will go first to Rio de Janiero, Brazil, thence to San Paulo, Brazil, and Buenos Aires, Argentina. It is expected to remain in Argentina two weeks.

Two compositions by Washingtonians will be featured on tonight's Water Gate concert in addition to Bach's G Minor Fugue, the First Brahms, and selections from "Tristram and Isolde." The compositions are "Logan Circle," by Deane Shure, and "Stars," by Mary Howe.

Three young Washington musicians are among the members of the orchestra. They are Miss Kay Rickert, 25, violinist, of 1901 Nineteenth street northwest; Franklin M. Biskey, 27, bassoonist, of 2707 Adams Mill road northwest, and Philip Silverman, tuba player, of 1723 G street northwest.

Diving Injury Fatal to Boy, 16

Cecil Callis, jr., 16, Montgomery Blair High School senior, died at 9:50 a. m. yesterday in Garfield Hospital, eight days after he swung from a tree limb and dived into Meadowbrook Creek, near East-West highway, fracturing his neck when he hit a stump in the water.

CECIL CALLIS

A group of boys carried him to his home at 902 Gist avenue. Silver Spring, and he was taken to Garfield Hospital.

The youth, called "Bucky" by his schoolmates, was the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Callis. There are two sisters, Betty and Dolores Callis, and a brother, Mervin Callis. The funeral arrangements were not completed yesterday.

Greenbelt Greets Refugee Children

strenuous joy characteristic of children embarking for summer camp. The boys had been reading books of adventure comics—Superman, and the like—and were feeling their muscles and ripe for boxing and other rough play.

The girls were subdued, conscious they were making a first visit to the Capital City of the country where "we are learning with our parents to become good citizens," and full of distaste for the war-like exhibitions of their chums.

Met by the Mayor

"These boys," sighed Edith Epstein, 11, transplanted two years ago from Frankfort, "are always thinking of fighting, just like men."

The children were met at the station by the Greenbelt Mayor, George A. Warner, who told his "son," William Freydberg, 12, to call him "Uncle George," and members of a special committee in charge of the refugee "camp" project, the Rev. Robert Kincheloe, of the Greenbelt Community Church; Mrs. Abraham Chasanow, Arthur Gawthrop, councilman; Mrs. McNamara and Mannie Gerst.

For an hour the children posed for pictures, piled on luggage in the train shed and draped variously about the Columbus statue, before they were packed into private cars and the Greenbelt station wagon for the 13-mile drive to "camp."

None had more than a vague understanding of why, for months, and, in some cases, years, they made the unhappy odyssey that took them from country to country until, at last, they were admitted to America, their families stripped of all but a few possessions and a little money.

"It wasn't good for us . . . my mother was afraid . . . we had 24 hours to leave," ran the explanations."

Norbert Stilman, 12, who slept last night in the home of W. Roy Nicodemus, caught a glimpse of Hitler, he said, from a shuttered window in his house in Vienna. He and his family were made to remain indoors and two policemen guarded the house because "they were afraid we might shoot him."

Father Was a Judge

William Freydberg arrived with his brother and sister, Henry, 10, and Hanna-lore, 7, youngest of the party. Their father was a judge in Berlin who has been three months in America learning a new profession. They fled Germany in 1938, living a year in Havana.

Henry will stay with the Chasanow family whose son, Howard, 3, has been impatient for days, his mother said, for his first meeting with "my big brother." Hanna was "adopted" by the family of Harry A. Bates, Navy Yard machinist, who has two daughters, Doris, 17, and Joyce, 11.

Gunther Schlessinger took his last vacation with his family in the Rhineland and Switzerland. Three and a half years ago they left Berlin where "you couldn't walk on the streets except at certain hours and couldn't go to school until they built one for Jews."

The family first went to Cumberland, Md., Gunther said, where his father, now in the hosiery business in the Bronx, went to work with an uncle, Simon Kochmann.

The father of 12-year-old Ruth Mahler served, she said, in the Australian Army in the last World War. One day "the police came and told him he would have to clean the streets." The Mahlers left Vienna a year and a half ago. Ruth is "a member of the family" at the home of William Blanchard.

Ruth Herzberg, 10, came from Fulda, Germany, where the "Christian children would always hit Jewish children." She reached America ten months ago, knowing only a few words of English which she has since learned to speak with only slight accent.

Speak English Well

She will be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Featherby, whose daughter, Patricia, 10, was born, Mrs. Featherby noted, under the same astrologic sign as Ruth.

Ruth is typical of the refugee children. All speak English well, some in clipped British accents, picked up in London schools.

John Lustig, 9, of Vienna, will "camp" at the home of Logan Wilson; George Gruenfeld, 11, also of Vienna, is the guest of Dr. James McCarl; Rolf Stern, 10, Nurenberg, Germany, is with the family of Joseph Lewis; Edith Epstein, 11, Frankfort, with Jacob Brickman; Ingeborg Thalhofer, 12, of Vienna, Edwin Childs; Marianne Eisner, 8, Breslau, Melvin Benjamin; Johanna Lehner, 12, of Vienna, Joseph Long.

Natty Bandit Robs Market Of Hundreds

A neatly-dressed blond man in a sport shirt held up the Mayflower Market, 1100 Connecticut avenue northwest, last night and escaped with the day's receipts of several hundred dollars.

At the point of a gun he made the manager, Byron D. Gilbert, turn over the cash, forced him and Raymond Williams, clerk, into a back room and walked away. The bandit's description, police said, tallies with that of a man who held up the Pickwick Liquor Store, scarcely a block away, and made off with more than $100 Saturday night.

Carrying what he said was "a large sum of money," Harold Hossinger, 35, manager of the McCray Refrigerator Distributors, 941 Maine avenue southwest, told police he thwarted a holdup by two men last night on darkened Maine avenue near his store. He ran to a street light, and his assailants apparently lost their nerve and fled.

Eloise P. Jenkins, of 1925 Sixteenth street northwest, became another of yesterday's robbery victims when she lost her pocketbook containing $39 and personal valuables to a sneak thief in the reading room of the Public Library at Ninth and K streets northwest.

Katherine Mary Francis, of 2517 K street northwest, reported her pocketbook was snatched by a colored man she had got to carry her suitcase up to her apartment. It contained $2.

Marcus Cooley, of 468 F street southwest, reported his room was looted while he was asleep and $231 stolen from a shoe in his dresser.

Capital Reproduced In Plaster Cast

R. Van Garrison, of 6633 Eastern avenue, Takoma Park, got an idea for a new glimpse of Washington, worked at the intricacies of it for six months, got the artist's cramp—and results.

His glimpse of the city is embodied in a plaster cast, of high-grade materials, worked on the scale of 2 inches to a mile. All of the buildings the tourists generally see are clearly outlined, as are streets, in true scaled width, and houses. He presented one to the White House.

Auto Mishap Kills 1, Hurts 11 in Family

Drive to Beach Ends in Tragedy Near Hollywood, Md.; Tourists Injured

A 73-year-old Washington woman was killed and 11 members of her family escaped with minor injuries and bruises Sunday when their car, en route to Scotland Beach, overturned near Hollywood, St. Marys County, Md., it was learned last night.

The traffic victim is Mrs. Anna Kertzman, of 719 Emerson street northwest, who died in St. Marys County Hospital, Leonardtown, a few hours after the mishap. She never regained consciousness and succumbed to head injuries.

Also in the auto were her son-in-law, John Murchake, 43, who was driving; his wife, Mary, 33; and their nine children, John, 18; Margaret, 13; William Michael, 12; Richard, 10; James, 8; George, 6; Betty Ann, 4; David, 3, and Catherine, 1½.

Mrs. Murchake, John, William Michael and James required medical treatment. The others escaped with bruises and shock.

Murchake, connected with a Washington lumber firm, said last night that he was driving the family to St. Marys City to visit his father, and from there they planned to go on to Scotland Beach. One mile below Hollywood, on the Three Notches road, he said, the car turned over when it struck a soft shoulder on a sharp curve.

Mrs. Kertzman came to Washington seven years ago upon the death of her husband, John, who operated a farm in St. Marys City. She was a native of Austro-Hungary, and a member of the National Slovak Society. Besides her daughter, a son, Michael, of Coatesville, Pa., survives.

Services will be held tomorrow at St. James' Catholic Church, St. Marys City.

Tourists at Mount Vernon and the Lincoln Memorial were traffic victims yesterday. Perry S. Toney, 50, of Hammond, Ind., suffered a fractured leg when struck at the Memorial by a car police said was driven by William New, jr., 17, of Chevy Chase, Md. Toney was taken to Emergency Hospital.

A collision on the parking lot at Mount Vernon brought minor injuries to Mrs. Rosanne Willard and her son, Llewellyn, 13, Koksburg, Pa. Police said the driver of one of the cars was Estelle H. Meade, 58, of 3652 Warder street northwest.

Three-year-old Joseph Wallace, 10 Carmody street, Seat Pleasant, Md., suffered a fractured skull went struck by an automobile near his home. He was taken to Providence Hospital.

Jenkins Smashes 11 World Auto Speed Marks

57 Public Links Players Shoot 73 or Better

Fast-Driving Mayor Defies Heat, Time

Salt Lake City Man Raises 50-Kilometer Record to 172.915; Best Speed: 183.041

By the Associated Press

Bonneville Salt Flats, Utah, July 22.—A. B. Jenkins, Salt Lake City's fast-driving mayor, met the combined challenge of heat and time today, ploughing through the rotting salt of the Utah desert flats at a rate which bettered world records with almost every turn of the 12½-mile oval course.

As he neared the halfway point in his contemplated 24-hour run, he had surpassed 11 established marks—most of them his own.

Already "out of salt" was the first of three tracks prepared for the endurance chase. The big wheels of Jenkins' car ripped the sun-softened beds into saline spray, digging deep into what had been a rock-hard cover and creating dangerous ruts and holes.

Shifts Course

At midafternoon he shifted to the middle course and slackened his pace only slightly in deference to the hazards of the desert heat.

Jenkins exceeded his first former record within less than 20 minutes after his start at 5:38 a. m. (Mountain Standard time). That was the 50-kilometer mark, raised, unofficially, from 171.38 to 172.915 miles an hour.

From then until the first pit stop at 350 miles, the Meteor's rate rose steadily, reaching an impressive 183.041 m. p. h. average for the 500 kilometers, nearly 6 miles better than the old 177.110.

Overcomes Handicap

Not a single intermediate record escaped nor did any of those for times and distances reached subsequent to the pit stop. In spite of the enforced reduction in speed during the heat of the day, Jenkins still managed to keep his averages well ahead of any earlier performance.

He and Cliff Bergere, of Los Angeles, on hand as relief driver, looked confidently for sunset to harden the salt beds and permit a fresh stepping-up of the pace.

Low-Scoring Record Set In Detroit

Andy Oliveri's 75 Best of District Contingent; Morris Has 78; Jankowski 81

By the Associated Press

Detroit, July 22.—Golfdom's public course players staged one of the great scoring rampages in links history today as they literally tore apart the Rackham municipal layout site of the nineteenth annual National Public Links Championship.

At the close of the first 18 holes of the 36-hole qualifying event no less than six players were deadlocked for the lead with two-under-par 69's and 57 contestants in the starting field of 191 had scored 73 or under, heralding a wild scramble for the 64 qualifying places in tomorrow's competition.

Six Have 69s

The leaders who made a shambles of par with their 69's were:

Worth Stimits, jr., of Colorado Springs, Colo., Rocky Mountain intercollegiate conference champion.

Adrian French, an unemployed Huntington Park, Calif., draftsman.

Fred H. Hill, Worcester, Mass., salesman who won the New England public links title in 1937, 1938 and 1939.

Luke Barnes, recent graduate of Atlanta's Tech High and sharer of medal honors in the 1939 public links meet at Baltimore.

Charles Ferrera, of San Francisco, National Public Links champion in 1931 and 1933.

Charles E. Harter, 25-year-old Indianapolis meat packer who confines his golf to week-ends.

Oliveri Has 75

The District of Columbia's four-man contingent was led by Andy Oliveri, the two-time city champion, with a 75. Oliveri will probably have to cut a stroke or two from his score today to make the match play rounds, while Bor Morris, with a 78, needs a subpar score and John Jankowski and Kenneth Zent are just about out of the running with 81 and 84, respectively.

The Harding Cup team score of Zent, Oliveri and Jankowski was 240, 23 strokes higher than the co-leaders.

A stroke back from the leaders with 70's were three other players who beat Rackham's par and the blazing sun.

They were Edward J. Furgol, Utica, N. Y., metal polisher; Robert Price, 40-year-old Oklahoma City coffee shop owner, and Donald Smith, an unheralded club swinger from St. Joseph, Mo.

Medal Race Close

Eleven players managed to equal par of 71 and stay within easy striking distance of the leaders in the fight for medal honors.

This contingent included Edwin M. Harper, Pocatello, Idaho, the Idaho State amateur king; Einar Hanson, San Francisco; Robert Clark, St. Paul; Charles Lind, Denver; John Siergej, Plainfield, N. J.; Michael Dietz, Detroit; John Skinner, Cleveland; Arthur Armstrong, Honolulu, a semifinalist last year; Michael Szwedko, Pittsburgh, brother of defending Champion Andrew Szwedko; Woodrow Malloy, Ann Arbor, Mich., and William Bublis, Chicago.

Kauffmann Has 72

Seventeen were tied at 72 while 20 others deadlocked at 73. Among those at 72 was Carl F. Kauffmann, of Pittsburgh, only three-time winner. The 55-year-old veteran played steadily.

Two other former winners—Andrew Szwedko and David A. Mitchell, of Atlanta, 1934 victor—fired 74s and had no strokes to spare for tomorrow.

Al Leach, of Cleveland, 1938 champion, was all but out of the contention with a 77, a soaring 40 on the outward nine wrecking his chances.

In view of today's scoring, the golfers were predicting that a 36-hole score of not more than 148,

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Whatever may be the accusations against Zeke Bonura, it can never be claimed that he isn't negotiable. He may have been a doubtful asset to the Nats but he has been no frozen asset. Whenever Clark Griffith requires a bit of spending money, he doesn't have to bother about clipping coupons. He just sells Bonura for sums varying from $10,000 to $25,000, at more or less regular intervals.

POVICH

Somehow, big Zeze always finds his way back to the Nats in time for a rapid turnover. He always turns up in Griffith's lap whereupon the Nats' owner gives him a new tryout for a few weeks and then slaps a new price tag on him. And Zeke always represents ready cash, and not petty cash.

When Griffith shipped him to the Cubs yesterday in exchange for $10,000 the Bonura turnovers reached a grand total of $35,000. Zeke was the medium of one of Griffith's cleverest trades. He was able to "rent" Bonura to the Giants for a year for $17,500. That is what his deal with the Giants amounted to. They bought Bonura in 1939 for $25,000 and sold him back to the Nats this year for $7,500.

It has been Zeke's great good luck—and Griffith's to be around in an era when there aren't enough good first basemen to go around. Big Zeke was an acceptable form of ersatz in this era, and thus the Cubs grabbed him for $2,500 more than the waiver price. In fact, they broke a leg to get Bonura. When Phil Cavaretta broke his leg with Glenn Russell already on the shelf with an injury, the Cubs suddenly displayed $10,000 worth of interest in Bonura.

The Cubs' purchase of Bonura is understandable. Gabby Hartnett's club is floundering about in fourth place, 14½ games out of the lead, and the pennant is gone for them. But Hartnett could still save his face with a first-division finish and is doubtless reasoning that Bonura is better than no first baseman at all.

It was understandable why Bill Terry didn't tolerate Bonura for more than one season. Terry had been a great first baseman himself and big Zeke's crimes against the art of playing the bag offended Terry's tender sensibilities on the subject. Terry was agonized when Bonura messed up easy chances and benched him after half the season. He cut Zeke's salary so much that it was evident Terry didn't care whether Zeke signed for 1940, or not.

But Terry did Bonura one great injustice when he described big Zeke's enthusiasm as "phoney pepper." There was nothing affected about the big Italian's incessant bellowing on the field. His spirit was as genuine and sincere as a baby's laugh. He was the first to grab the hand of a pitcher who had turned in a winning game or to slap the back of a guy who made an important hit for his club. Bonura never sulked, pouted or dogged it. He gave 100 per cent of what he had which, at times, was not much.

We liked the big galoot, so we're sort of glad that the team he's joining is the Cubs. At Chicago, he'll be among friends. When he was with the White Sox, the South Side rocked with the celebrations of "The Zeke Bonura Club," a society of fans that whooped it up for Zeke and basked in the reflected glory of the big fellows' feats for the Sox. He was unhappy at New York because, he said, New York people didn't like him.

The rift between Bonura and Jimmy Dykes, which started Zeke on his peregrinations around the big leagues is one of the more charming stories of baseball. It revolves around a broken leg suffered by Bonura in the hour of one of his great personal triumphs. He broke his leg while stealing home for the first time in his life to win a game for Dykes' White Sox.

It was when Bonura was convalescing, for a period that Dykes thought was far too long, that the White Sox manager accused Zeke of letting the club down. To Dykes' ears came reports that Bonura was healthy enough to be making the rounds of his favorite South Side dance halls, and that his terpsichore was not getting rusty. In defense of Zeke, it must be said that he denied the charges. His leg troubled him the moment he rejoined the club, he said.

His sensational steal of home, his broken leg and his trouble with Dykes were all the result of a horrible mistake, it developed. Dykes never intended for Bonura to try a steal of home. He knew the limits of Zeke's speed afoot. Standing on the steps of the dugout, with Zeke prancing about on third base, Dykes unconsciously brushed his nose with his hand to flick away a fly that had settled there—and unconsciously, he was giving Bonura the steal sign.

Gee, Bucs' Star, Balks, Won't Go To Albany Farm

$75,000 Rookie Hurler Awaits Reaction to His Disobedience

By the Associated Press

Charlotte, Vt., July 22.—Long limbed Johnny Gee, the Pittsburgh Pirates' $75,000 pitcher who turned up with a dead arm instead of a fireball, took things easy at this resort today awaiting the Pirate management's reaction to his refusal to go to their Albany, N. Y., farm team in the Eastern League.

"I told Joe Schultz, head of their farm system, that I wasn't going to Albany," Gee said, "and it looks to me like the next move is up to them."

Gee went to Pittsburgh last fall after he won 20 games and lost 10 for Syracuse, his home town, in the International League. He pitched three big league games, winning one and losing two.

Gee bounced back to Syracuse at the start of the 1940 season. About a week ago he was ordered to Albany, but instead, came here to visit Ray Fisher, his baseball coach at the University of Michigan.

X-Rays Reveal Leonard O.K.; Bonura Sold

First-Sacker Goes To Chicago Cubs; Nats Meet Tigers

By Shirley Povich.
Post Staff Writer

The Nats were rolling into the West last night, heartened by two late developments: (1) The X-ray reports disclosing that Dutch Leonard's right wrist was not fractured and (2) the sale of First Baseman Zeke Bonura to the Cubs.

The Bonura transaction deprives the Washington club of most of its showmanship, but otherwise Bonura will scarcely be missed. His .270 batting average was not exactly vital to the Nats' success and the Nats are not dispensing with much fielding ability.

Clark Griffith announced Bonura's sale to the Cubs on waivers yesterday after it developed that the Chicago National League team was the only club in the majors to claim him. The price was $10,000, according to Griffith, $2,500 more than the fixed waiver price. The Cubs bought Bonura because of a first-base emergency brought about by the injuries to Glenn Russell and Phil Cavaretta.

Sammy West on First

Sammy West moves into the role of Washington's No. 1 first baseman following the sale of Bonura. An outfielder during the 15 years of his big league career, West has long had a yen to play first base and Manager Bucky Harris is willing to entrust him with the job on the theory that he at least will stop ground balls.

West has played a creditable game at the position whenever he has been called upon, and on Sunday, when he replaced Bonura in the second game, he contributed a game-winning home run.

He is only a stop-gap, however, in the Nats' long-range plans for first base. In the minor leagues, Griffith has two budding big leaguers, either of whom represents

Pete Maher, Bare-Knuckle Boxer, Is Dead

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, July 22.—Peter Maher, 71, one of the last of the fighters in the bare knuckle days more than 40 years ago, died here today.

Maher was born at Galway, Ireland, in 1869 and began fighting when 13 years old. Still in his early teens, he fought exhibitions with the famed John L. Sullivan and Peter Jackson, and it was at Sullivan's suggestion that Maher came to the United States.

Several years ago Jack Dempsey came to Baltimore to referee a fight and met Maher.

"What's wrong with the fighters of today?" Maher asked, "they don't go down when they are hit.

"In the old days many of the matches were short and sweet. You either hit the other fellow on the chin, or was hit yourself. And they were the good old days, too."

Maher knew what he was talking about, because Bob Fitzsimmons knocked him out in one of their three battles. Kid McCoy, kayoed Maher in the fifth round in 1900, Gus Ruhlin stopped him in the second round in 1902 and Joe Choynski knocked him out in the second round in 1903. He went 20 rounds to a draw with Ruhlin in 1899.

He fought for the last time in 1905 when Joe Butler won by a knockout in the first round in Philadelphia.

Maher had lived with his son, Peter, jr., here since 1929.

Maher once recalled how leading fighters used to travel with burlesque troupes, meeting all comers in coast-to-coast exhibitions.

On one occasion he battled nine men in one night at the old Monumental Theater in Baltimore.

That was about the turn of the century, Peter, jr., declared, recalling that his father fought 317 times with his show that year in addition to his regular professional bouts.

Maher was 5 feet 11¾ inches in height and weighed 190 pounds.

Funeral services will be held here Thursday.

Lesnevich Wins Debut as Heavy, Beating Sears

By the United Press

Garfield, N. J., July 22.—Gus Lesnevich, 180, Cliffside Park, N. J., No. 1 contender or the light heavyweight title, essayed his first heavyweight start tonight and decisively defeated Wally Sears, 180, Minersville, Pa., in the main 10-round bout at Belmont Bowl.

Lesnevich, out of action since his Detroit fight with Billy Conn, light heavyweight boss, floored Sears three times and opened a cut over the veteran Pennsylvanian's left eye.

Frankie Conn, 138, Lyndhurst, N. J., defeated Tony Novello, 133, Englewood, N. J., in the seventh round semifinal.

Zeke Bonura Travels Again

HE'S NOW A CUB—For the second time in three years Zeke Bonura, first baseman, was packing his belongings yesterday to leave the Washington Nationals. Sold to the Chicago Cubs for $10,000, Zeke was to report to his new team at Boston today. In 1938 he was sold to the Giants for a reported $25,000 but he was resold to the Nationals this year

Reds Invade East Confident of Flag

Cincinnati, Enjoying Wide Margin, Meets Rival Dodgers in 'Crucial' Series; Leaders Play 16 Games on Invasion

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, July 22.—The Cincinnati Reds, class of the National League whether Brooklyn likes it or not, started a critical 16-game Eastern tour today in the best shape in history, enjoying their longest lead of the season, and confident this is their year again.

Tomorrow they meet the Dodgers, supposedly the threat of the senior circuit, in a double-header which may have great bearing on the outcome of the second half of baseball's fiscal year. The Reds' current margin over the runner-up is five games.

Here's the Setup

Win, lose or draw, the figures add up this way:

Were it Manager Bill McKechnie's way, the champions could coast the rest of the way on .500 ball. Winning 37 of the remaining 74 games would give 92 won, 62 lost, average .597, and many a pennant has been won on less. However, such a program would require cooperation from Brooklyn and probably the New York Giants—both notably cantankerous at times.

Right now, for the information of those who call them the second "Hitless Wonders," the Reds have added four points to the team batting average in five games, bringing it to .267.

Although that's fourth in the league, they're tops in fielding with .980, a good mark for a team of first basemen. They have bobbled the ball just 64 times in 80 games and a tie. The infield, which cost $25,000 for Bill Werber and little more than carfare for the other members, has turned in 85 double plays.

Million Dollar Pitching

The offensive has produced 55 homers, close to 130 doubles, a score of triples and 35 stolen bases.

As to pitching, McKechnie probably could raise $1,000,000 on his staff at a sheriff's sale if somebody foreclosed. Without going into the individual merits of Messrs Derringer, Walters, Thompson, Turner, et al., the earned run average of all pitchers, including the ones released, is 3.0375. Only 35 home runs have been hit by the opposition.

Finally, don't bet that one of them doesn't throw a no-hitter this year. All those one, two, and three hit games are giving seven managers worries.

Miller and McLeod Tie Diffenbaugh, Overton in Pro-Am; Md. Open on Today

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

George R. Miller pepped up the Maryland Open practice round pro-amateur tournament yesterday at Columbia Country Club with a hole-in-one on the sixteenth, enabling him and host pro Fred McLeod to deadlock Kenwood Pro George Diffenbaugh and Mid-Atlantic amateur champion Spencer Overton with best ball 67's.

Ralph Beach, the sectional P. G. A. president from Suburban, matched par figures with a 70 to win the pro sweepstakes over Al Houghton, the Beaver Dam mentor, who was one shot back with a 71. Next best scores were 73's by Lewis Worsham, Burning Tree, and Rut Coffey, Winchester, Va.

A flock of late and misplaced entries brought the starting field for the 36-hole medal play championship today to 76. McLeod, Coffey and Worsham were among the new entries, while the only withdrawal was Al Jamison, Bradley Hills mentor.

His Second Ace

Miller, who is playing the best golf among the host club amateurs at present, banged the second ace of his career in his 6-iron shot on the 154-yard hole, taking a second bounce past the cup and then bounding back in with backspin. Four years ago he aced the seventeenth hole, a par four, from the temporary tee. It is also the second consecutive year a hole-in-one has marked the Maryland Open practice, Lewis Worsham holing his tee shot on the fifth at Hillendale last year.

Miller's ace was timely, but Freddie McLeod supplied the winning punch for his team by calmly knocking in a 15-foot birdie putt on the eighteenth hole for the 67. The host club team ran into a two-over-par five on the par three thirteenth.

George Diffenbaugh played one of his first tournament rounds without a birdie, but his partner, Overton, the amateur ace from Rolling Road, made up for it by banging home three birdie putts. Excepting the ninth and seventh holes, Overton was three under par for 16 holes, but when he was in trouble George was on hand with a par.

The other prize-winning duo on the pro-amateur was Jack Harris, unattached professional, and Jerry Hart, the former Federal Government chapion from Indian Spring, who put together a 68 best ball, each playing the course for the first time.

Beach's winning round in the pro sweepstakes included consecutive birdies on the fifteenth and sixteenth holes, and another on the fourth. His partner, Earle Skinker, could only help one shot in the pro-amateur, however, and then finished out of the money with 68. Houghton, four-time winner of the Maryland Open and at present in the hotest scoring streak of any District of Columbia professional, played the nines in 36—35—71, for second money in the sweepps. He missed a half-dozen sinkable birdie putts.

Lafferty Makes Eagle

Miller's ace wasn't the only eagle of the day. Ken Lafferty banged in a full six-iron shot for a three on the par five twelfth, after scuffing his second shot.

Defending champion John O'Donnell reported a 77 in his first trip around the course this year, and he will have to better that score by eight or nine shots each round if he hopes to mark up a second State Open title today.

Houghton seems to be the man to beat although Wiffy Cox is always a favorite in any local tournament he enters. Andy Gibson and Beach will offer the stiffest competition from the Baltimore delegation while from Virginia O'Donnell and Coffey will be the ones to watch. Prominent amateurs among the late entries included Miller and Earle Skinker from the host club and Billy Shea, Congressional.

Tru-Blu Wins Mid-Atlantic Softball Title

Standard Linen Bows, 7-4, to 5-Run Rally In Fifth Inning

Tru-Blu retained its Middle Atlantic section softball championship at Ballston Stadium last night by scoring five runs in a big fifth inning to defeat Standard Linen, 7-4, in the finals of an extended tournament. Tru-Blu won the title last year with an entirely different team, which now is playing under the Senate Beer standard.

Larrick's double, cleaning the bases, and a drive by Zanelotti which Standard Linen Centerfielder J. Weber muffed, allowing Zanelotti to score behind another runner, accounted for the fifth-inning tallies.

The losers threatened in the ninth when they pushed across three runs on a walk, three singles and a fielder's choice, but Billy Sullivan who pitched the whole game for Tru-Blu, squelched the rally in plenty of time. Sullivan allowed seven hits, two more than yielded by losing hurler Bump Simonds. Three errors, however, hurt Standard Linen's cause.

In a Dixie League preliminary, Arnold allowed only two hits as Glen Echo defeated Posner Bros., 4-1.

Revenge Leading Chicago-Mackinac Yacht Competition

Chicago, July 22 (AP).—The United States Coast Guard reported today that its latest information on the Chicago-Mackinac yacht race had the Revenge, owned by Blair Walliser and Kenneth Griffin, leading the fleet of 18 boats making the 331-mile trip.

The information said the fleet had passed North Manitou Island about 11 a. m. (E. S. T.). Progress was only about 3 miles an hour, the Coast Guard said, with the fleet encountering light to variable southwest winds. This point was roughly 100 miles from the goal.

The Manitou, James Rowland's 62-foot yawl, was leading the cruising division, with the Tahuna 2 miles astern. Lively Lady, the entry of Otto Dreher, of Milwaukee, was leading the class B universal division, about 2 miles astern of the Revenge.

Col. Miller Hints NBA May Depose Armstrong

Action Would Greatly Increase Importance of Bout Monday Between Williams, McDowell, Two of Leading Contenders for 147-lb. Title

Interest was heightened yesterday in the featured welterweight bout between Holman Williams and Wild McDowell Monday night at Griffith Stadium by news that the National Boxing Association may soon order Henry Armstrong's 147-pound title vacated and an elimination tournament to decide his successor.

In event that the crown-stripping action is taken, Williams, a protege of Joe Louis, would be a featured contender in the elimination process. Louis will referee Monday night's semifinal fight.

The hint that Armstrong is in danger of losing his welterweight championship was given by Lieut. Col. Heinie Miller, N. B. A. president and chairman of the local boxing, who issued this statement:

"Armstrong hasn't fought a real welterweight since he won the title, and it looks as thought the N. B. A. will have to take steps to default his crown."

Two Others Deposed

Should the N. B. A. carry out Miller's threat, Armstrong would become the third boxing champion deposed in recent months. Joey Archibald, erstwhile featherweight ruler, and Lou Ambers, former king of the lightweights, were victims of the fistic fathers' displeasure with their conduct as champions.

Miller stated—and it is believed he is expressing the views of other N. B. A. officials—that an elimination tournament would find Holman Williams, rated No. 3, meeting Milt Aron, of Chicago, ranked No. 2, and the Cocoa Kid, ranked No. 1, boxing Izzy Janazzo, of New York, rated No. 4.

In this case McDowell has a chance to project himself into the picture, should he whip Williams in next Monday's 10-rounder. Wild Bill beat Phil Furr twice, and previously won three other bouts. He lost to Cocoa Kid, but put up a greater fight than did Furr.

Gabe Menendez, Joe Turner's matchmaker, was quick to foresee the possibilities of having such matches staged in Washington. He was responsible for matching Furr and McDowell, Cocoa vs. Furr, McDowell vs. Cocoa—all welterweight attractions. Menendez was responsible for bringing Joe Louis to town for an appearance as referee next Monday.

Would Corner Market

Menendez told Miller yesterday he would like to "corner the market on the welterweight tournament matches for Washington."

"If the N. B. A. forces Armstrong to vacate his title, I'd like to stage Williams vs. Aron, Cocoa bs Janazzo, this summer at the stadium," he said yesterday. "I brought together Cocoa Kid and Wild Bill McDowell, and we drew nearly $4,000. I put Cocoa against Furr and we grossed some $7,000 An elimination tournament match would draw between $10,000 and $15,800. Washington deserves to have the welterweight championship bout staged here."

Tickets for the McDowell-Williams bout, with Louis as the extra attraction as referee of the semi-windup, go on sale today at the arena. There will be no increase in prices.

Five Rasslers Obtained for Battle Royal

Turner Rounds Up Gang For Thursday Match, Russell Among Them

Promoter Joe Turner yesterday rounded up five hard-boiled and muscular grapplers for Thursday night's battle royal at Griffith Stadium's program, to be featured by a bout between Paul Jones, the Texas scissors king, and Joe Cox, the Kansas Krasher.

In the battle royal are Tommy O'Toole, the Irish ace; Reb Russell, erstwhile Texas sheriff; Abie Coleman, the gnome; Tommy Rae, of Boston, and Jack Drake, a newcomer from Oregon.

Turner is seriously considering matching the winner of the battle royal against the winner of the James-Cox feature bout.

The semiwindup will find Frank Sexton, one-time Ohio State athlete, meeting Warren Bockwinkle, St. Louis University athlete. Both won on last Thursday's card.

Jones will be shooting for his fourth straight victory, and will pit his figure-four scissors hold against Cox's famous arm stretch.

Two Boat Race Meetings Set For Tonight

President Remon to Preside at Both to Map Season's Events

John A. Remon, president of the President's Cup Regatta Association and of the American Power Boat Association, will have a big night ahead of him tonight.

Remon will preside at a meeting of the council of the Power Boat Association at the Shoreham Hotel at 6:30. At 8:30 he is slated to preside at a session of the board of directors and committee chairmen of the President's Regatta at his home, 3104 Thirty-third place northwest.

Around 11 local members, in addition to Douglass C. Fonda, secretary, are due to gather at the Shoreham to discuss the President's Cup, the Gold Cup in Detroit and other big regattas this summer.

Later a number of the council members will attend the President's Cup session at Remon's home, where reports from various committees working on the regatta scheduled September 27, 28, 29 over the Potomac will be made.

Meanwhile, R. Aubrey Bogley, regatta race chairman, returned yesterday from week-end races at Havre de Grace and Northeast with the announcement that a number of outstanding winners at both regattas had been lined up for the big event here. Bogley said the 11 world's records smashed at Havre were expertly clocked, and are due to receive the sanction of the A. P. B. A.

Cameo, Heurich Clash Today in Important Game

Cameo Furniture and Heurich Brewers will meet at 5:15 this afternoon on the West Ellipse in a Washington Post-Industrial League baseball game. Heurich was first half champion, while Cameo is leading the second-half race with three victories and no defeats. In the present race Heurich has won two games and lost one.

Big Ed Colliflower and "Fee" Collier will pitch and catch for Heurich, while the Cameo hurler will be Otis Printz. The two teams have split even in four games thus far this season. This will be the "rubber" meeting and also should have an important bearing on the second-half race.

$500 in Prizes Awaits Printer Golf Winners

17th Annual Tourney Opens Here August 5; To Be Over 72 Holes

Chick Heimer, head of the Washington Chapter of the Union Printcraft International Golf Association has supervised an outlay of more than $500 for prizes for the seventeenth annual championship which starts here August 5.

Printcraft golfers from all over the country and a small delegation from Canada are making plans to arrive here August 3 for registration and the annual meeting of the third largest golf association in the United States.

The Western delegation, Cincinnati, Kansas City, the West Coast, St. Louis, St. Paul, Chicago, Cleveland, Indianapolis, etc., may make up a special train, all meeting in Akron, Ohio, and completing the final leg of the trip together.

Heimer and his committees, including C. E. Purdy, Washington golf commissioner, and E. A. Merkle, vice president, decided to make the prizes equal in all flights. Thus the winner of each flight will receive a prize similar to the winner of Class D, and so on, with the runner-up, third and fourth low net, etc.

The same system of percentages that has been used in the past to determine the various flights will be used this year. After the first 36 holes of the 72-hole medal play championship, all the entries will be classified.

The first 10 per cent will be the first or championship flight and will battle outright for the title. The next 20 per cent of the scorers will be in Class A, the next 30 per cent in Class B, the next 20 per cent in Class C and the final 20 per cent in Class D. Thus every entry has a chance to figure in on the prize distribution.

Chances of a Washingtonian copping the title was boosted when Joe Balestri played his home Beaver Dam layout, scene of the championship, in 69 strokes Sunday for a new amateur course record. The Allied Trades Champion of last year will be battling for the Printcraft championship this year as the groups have been merged into one.

With CONSIDINE

New York, July 22.—A personal appeal from Don Budge and Vincent Richards to Holcombe Ward, president of the U. S. Lawn Tennis Association, has failed to gain the latter's indorsement of a national open championship for the benefit of the Red Cross.

CONSIDINE

As was expected, Ward told the players that he had no authority to sponsor a tournament in which the leading pros and leading amateurs would be at last permitted to play. He quoted something called Article 28, Paragraph A, of the rules of the International Tennis Federation. The U. S. L. T. A. belongs to that body. It was suggested that he send a radiogram to the I. T. F., if there is anything left of it, and humbly ask permission to stage a tournament we should have had a decade ago. It was felt that since all of the money derived from the tournament would go to the relief of suffering in Europe that the I. T. F., if any, would be glad to send back permission.

But Ward mistrusts the radio, probably on the grounds that it is a fad, and won't send the message. "An open tournament would favor five or six players," he told Budge and Richards. Under the same reasoning we expect the big league baseball show to close down in a week or two, because Joe DiMaggio, Bobby Feller and Bucky Walters are getting more out of the game than the others.

Ward pointed out to Budge and Richards that the pros did not distinguish themselves in their charity tournament for the Finnish relief fund. In that exhibition, the early amateur training of the pros came out and they chiseled a $10,000 gate down to $4,000 with a long series of "transportation, etc.," items, including a $50 subway ride from Brooklyn.

These were tactics which they had been taught by Ward's amateur body during the years when they were living from handout to mouth. The trouble was that this time their deed was properly publicized, whereas the comparable fenagling in amateur tennis never gets aired. Besides, the Finns got 40 per cent of a gross gate. Many charity events, especially fights, produce as little as 2 per cent for charity—though the promoters and principals of the demonstration go around beating their breast, trying on halos—for size.

"Besides," Ward warned, "it's possible that if we had an open we'd eventually be faced with the problem of a pro reaching the final round and then refusing to play, unless he was given more money." So far, nothing like this has ever happened in pro tennis. The only case of this kind we know of was turned in by the U. S. L. T. A.'s current fair-haired boy. This amateur, as he is called, stuck a figurative gun in the ribs of a Miami club last winter and demanded a big boost in his expenses before taking the court. And got it.

The futility of trying to get an old line tennis official to reason, soon struck the players. The meeting came to an end. And the pros, at the suggestion of Al Laney, are now trying to arrange a Round Robin at the Forest Hills stadium some week-end, with everything, this time, going to the Red Cross. As for a tennis open—which would be a shot in the arm for the fading game, and as prosperous as the golf open—that is doomed until such time as Ward and the other tories of the sport are retired to pasture.

Thus, the U. S. L. T. A. will continue to sponsor only amateur tennis. Yet if they indorsed one of their own rules as savagely as they are enforcing that absurd code of a defunct foreign organization which prohibits open tournaments, the big winds of tennis couldn't stage much of a national singles championship at Forest Hills next month.

The rule we speak of is one which limits the subsidized tournament playing of amateurs to eight weeks a year. By the time the national singles are on tap at Forest Hills, nearly every player who can draw a nickel through the turnstiles will have smashed the rule to bits, with months of polite bumhood.

If Ward is scrupulously thorough enough to make the U. S. L. T. A. live up to the "no open tournament" ruling of an international tennis body which has been blown to kingdom come by the war, why isn't he thorough enough to ban Bobby Riggs, Don McNeill, Frankie Parker, Elwood Cooke and other money-makers of amateur tennis who have kicked the eight-week rule in the teeth?

Oh well . . .

Fogoso Triumphs by Head in Feature Race at Empire City

Third Covey Takes Place In Phosphor

Jockey Haas, Up On Victor, Almost 'Sleeps Away Victory; Night Tide Wins Show

By the Associated Press

Empire City Race Track, Yonkers, N. Y., July 22.—The terrific heat and humidity seemed to agree with hot favorites here today as the Yonkers meeting began the last of its four flourishing weeks.

W. C. Winfrey's Fogoso, recently victorious in $5,000 claiming company, eked out a head triumph in today's featured Phosphor Handicap (Class "D"), but Leon (Buddy) Haas, his veteran pilot, almost "went to sleep" long enough to toss it off in the closing stages. Haas apparently did not notice H. P. Headley's Third Covey sneaking up on the inside until nearly too late to rouse the favorite. Third money went to W. J. Susini's Night Tide, three lengths behind.

Fogoso was the fourth successful choice in five events, paying $8.80 for two. His time for the abbreviated six furlongs was 1:09 2-5. Haas scored his second straight victory when Fogoso clicked.

A crowd of 10,568, most of them minus hats and coats, visited the Hilltop track. They wagered $403,033 on the first five contests.

Shoulder Arms and Night Tide put on a private show for more than a half mile. Neither could stand the gaff when the important stage of the race was reached. Fogoso dashed into a two-length advantage entering the stretch and looked an easy winner until Haas, at first unaware of the fast-closing Third Covey on the rail, began taking it easy. He started riding hard again in the last few strides, just in time to avert defeat.

Selections at Empire City

Dear Al:

A representative of the Hollywood Turf Club was at Havre de Grace last spring. He looked over toward the box where W. L. Brann, owner of Challedon, was sitting, sighed and said, "It certainly would be a feather in the cup of the Hollywood track if we could get Challedon to come out to the coast to race, say Kayak II. But I guess that will be impossible." When I told him that it might be done, he smiled as much as to say, "Don't kid me, big boy." I explained to him that Challedon was more than a moneymaker to Brann and that he might ship the horse out for the race "just to give the Californians a chance to see a good horse." That is about what happened. It is not new to Brann, either. If you remember, he sent Challedon to Kentucky last fall after a cheap stake race. Pressed for a reason, he admitted that it was only because Challedon had improved since the Derby and he wanted Kentuckians to see the colt at his best. Speaking of this $50,000 Gold Cup affair, coming up Saturday, one has to marvel at the riding of Jockey George Woolf. He is the specialist of the saddle. He rides only when he can get a mount in a big race. True, he might tune up a bit now and then, but you will generally find him where there is big dough and he's generally on the front end. Woolf rides Challedon, and if he wins it will be his third straight victory in the West Coast classic. He won with Seabiscuit, then Kayak II. This time he hopes to make Challedon beat Kayak II. just as he did in the Pimlico Special. Well, the turf picture hereabouts will be hung up at Belair tomorrow, and for ten straight racing days the fans are expected to pile into the sporty plant. Today I'm taking another flier at Empire City. I won't see you on the rail until tomorrow. BILL.

First race—Spang performed in good style at Delaware and appears to have an edge on the company gathered for the day's opener. Wenuit and Stop Loss are fair ones and will be ready to battle it out if the top one makes mistakes.

Second race—They had a hard time getting this field together and I believe it fits Big Boy Blue nicely. At any rate, I'm going to string along. High End and Apprehend appear capable of holding the others safe.

Third race—Dotwill could be the right one in this rather open affair. Needs only the right handling in my book. Super Shower should make a good showing. Latoure is a fair sort and deserves mention in the money circle.

Fourth race—Pont Neuf gets my call for this battle. Has fair form and likes the conditions. Forty Eight is recommended by some good trials. Highscope probably will find a place in the pay-off group.

Fifth race—Roman Flag has too much on the ball for this gang. Needs only to run his race and I believe he will. Any price is a good one. Merry Knight has class and is due respect. Shipmadilly is a possible surprise.

Sixth race—Star of Padula, one that I first dug up in Maryland last year, may use this as the means of collecting the main end of a purse. Zosteria is as good as those ailing legs. Boston Pal for the minor award.

Seventh race — Head Hunter should take care of the day's finale. He favors the route, and is fit as hands make horses. Mantagna and Phara Warrior to complete the money bracket.

Best bet—Roman Flag.

Belair Opens Tomorrow for 10-Day Meet

Track Head Expects $1,000,000 Take Of '39 to Be Beaten

By Walter Haight

That amazing Belair track opens tomorrow—amazing because it grew from a few clouds of dust several years ago to a modern turf plant that lured more than $1,000,000 (count 'em) through the mutuel department last year during ten days of racing. Coming on the heels of record meetings at Hagerstown and Charles Town, General Manager Ray Bryson and his associates have every reason to believe that the 1939 record average of $125,000 daily will be surpassed.

Belair's prosperity has not been one confined to the owners of the track. Improvements galore have been made and purses have been hoisted to the delight of the horse owners. In addition to hikes here and there in overnight events, four $1,000 purses, a new high for ten days of small-track racing in Maryland, are offered. The first is the Belair Inaugural, feature of the opening day program.

The first steeplechasing of the Maryland fair season will be conducted at this plant. The course, designed and built under the direction of William duPont, jr., is a sporty affair and it has drawn good timbertoppers from Virginia and Delaware horse circles. Racing Secretary Eddie Brennan is confident that he can fill the daily hedge event.

The six furlong track puts Belair out of the half-mile class and it is offering all the racing features of the mile tracks, including the Puett electric starting gate, the photo-chart camera and the American totalizator. It is being freely predicted that Belair within the next few years will be remodeled into a mile track and will join the bigtime circuits.

Belair, as a lure for racing fans with plenty of betting money, has long since graduated from the gamble class. Backers of the track, newest in Maryland, had the jitters before the first season's racing was offered.

Now there is a new grand stand, joined to the original small one, and the track's publicity department claims 9,000 fans can be accommodated. There is a sporty clubhouse and more than 100 private boxes.

Post time for the first race is 2 p. m., with the daily double operating on the first and second races.

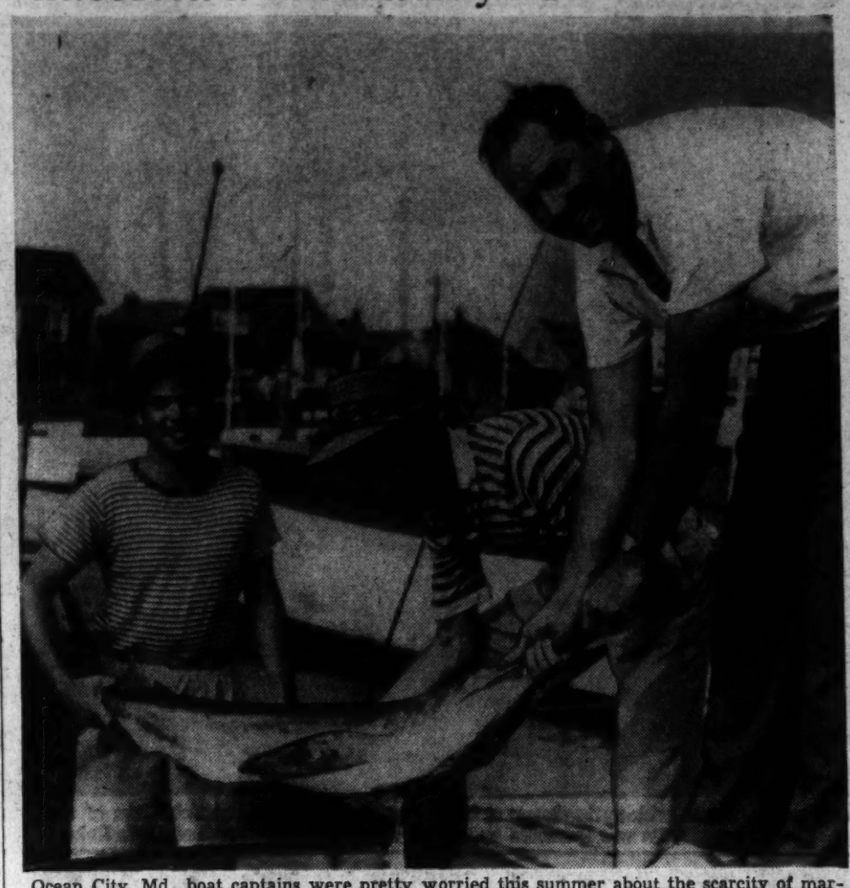
Here's Proof of That First Maryland Marlin of Season



Ocean City, Md., boat captains were pretty worried this summer about the scarcity of marlin until the first one was boated Saturday. Another was caught Sunday. Here with marlin No. 1 (left to right) are Leland Sterry, Delray Beach, Fla., who boated the 7-foot fish; Maurice G. Field, also of Delray, who accompanied him, and Capt. Dee Sanderson

Bill Ackerman ON FISHING

Billy McConnell Sets New Record With Large Bonito

Several days ago Billy McConnell, fishing from the cruiser Coco with Capt. J. T. Harrod, boated a bonito that tipped the scales at 26¼ pounds. It was officially accepted by the Metropolitan Miami Summer Fishing Tournament as an entry and as a new world record for the true bonito. It displaces the 22½ pounder that has been top place in the books for the species S. sarda since 1929.

ACKERMAN

Nearly as interesting as the record is the fact that it was caught from the old Jacpau II, now named the Coco since it was supplanted by the Jacpau III two years ago—the Elco cruiser Paul and Jack Townsend used in much of their pioneering of the marlin fishing off Ocean City. Boats have an identity as people have personality—even down to the rotting of the last plank, and though it was impossible for her to continue under the name that brought prominence back in 1934, the accomplishing of things beyond the ordinary continues as normally as existence itself.

Two fish have been reported in the neighborhood of the Jack Spot and the Rips, but we know of eight down below-hooked but not landed. Capt. John Cass, running out of Chincoteague, had four on.

Capt. Bill Hatch, originator of the dropback, the trick that made it possible for sports anglers to catch the bill and swordfishes, and who skippered the Jacpau II, is back at Ocean City for the marlin season after three months down on the Chilean and Peruvian coasts with Mike Lerner and the American Museum of Natural History expedition.

Paul Townsend expects to give the area below and inshore of Winter Quarter Light Vessel a thorough going over, for there is every indication the marlin are down there rather than on their usual grounds southeast of Ocean City.

They are still catching channel bass down the North Carolina coast, but the going is spotty. It might well be compared to our bay waters—throughout the week the catches run good, but just about the time the week-enders start to arrive they lay off.

Capt. Charles Perry, at Oregon Inlet, had top catch of the week with 24 large fish.

Catches of bass in Kitty Hawk Bay, which is back of the Wright Memorial, have been running numerous and large. From reports, the fish are averaging from 3 to 4 pounds.

A. Gordon Fleet, retiring president of the Maryland Outdoor Life Federation, has been named by Governor Herbert O'Connor as a member of the Maryland State Game and Inland Fish Commission to fill the position left vacant by William H. Labrot.

Fleet, in addition to heading the Federation of 52 conservation organizations, is a director of the Chesapeake Bay Fishing Fair Association, a delegate to the National Wild Life Federation and a past president of the Ann Arundel Conservation Association.

Down in Front

By Richards Vidmer

Someone asked me a surprising question the other day.

"Don't you ever get bored with sports events?"

It started a train of thought. Bored? of course not. Just because it has been my destiny to follow the sphere of sports for some 20 years is no reason why I should feel fed up. There are plenty of fans who have been following the big events longer than that, voluntarily. And I started thinking of all the high spots that have stood out in my memory over the course of two decades behind a typewriter. There have been unforgettable moments in every field.

VIDMER

Take baseball for instance. There was the final game of the 1924 World's Series, with the Giants and Senators tied at three games each. Walter Johnson, a Nation's hero, had pitched twice in this, his first World's Series, and twice he had been beaten. And it seemed that the Senators were going to follow him into defeat, for the Giants were leading into the eighth inning.

Then suddenly, without warning, Washington struck and tied the score. But Megridge, the lean left hander who had been hurling for the Senators, had been removed for a pinch hitter. And who was there left on Bucky Harris' staff who might hold the Giants the rest of the way?

Every face turned toward the bull pen when Washington took the field for the beginning of the ninth inning. A gasp of surprise swept over the thousands, followed by a sudden, spontaneous cheer. For out of the bull pen came the famously familiar figure of Walter Johnson. Twice he had been beaten, but in the final, pulsating test, the Senators were going to win or lose with him.

As I recall now the first man he faced tripled and hearts sank as the great Sir Walter seemed destined to fail a third time. But he didn't fail. He halted that rally without allowing the Giants to score. They threatened again in the tenth and the eleventh, but each time, with men on bases, Johnson's courage and strength turned them back.

And there was that breathless moment in the tenth inning of the same game when Johnson almost won his own game with a home run that missed the far-off leftfield bleachers by a mere matter of inches. But in the twelfth inning, triumph came to the great right-hander, sweet triumph in a World's Series after 15 years of waiting. And even the most ardent Giant fans could feel no regrets.

Those final moments of that game were as tense and tingling as almost any I have known in the sphere of sports. But

By the Associated Press

New York, July 22.—The National Professional Football League today announced its usual 55-game schedule for the coming season, opening with a single game at Pittsburgh September 8 and closing with four games December 1.

The first day in which all ten clubs will see action will be October 13, but every outfit will have played one or more games before then.

Five night games in the regular season's play also have been scheduled, with Philadelphia in four of them.

Thirteen games bringing together clubs of the loop's Eastern and Western sections will be played. However, the New York Giants will not make any Western trips.

and possibly lower, would be required to win one of the 64 places in match play which opens Wednesday. Last year players who totaled 156 got in the match play. The record wa s set in Cleveland in 1938 at 151.

Dethroning of Los Angeles as team champion appeared likely. Pittsburgh and Oklahoma City were deadlocked with 217s at the halfway mark in the competition for the Warren G. Harding Trophy. One stroke back were San Francisco, Chicago and Honolulu. Dayton, Ohio, was next with 220, while Atlanta and Louisville counted 221. Los Angeles scored 224 for fourteenth.

Broadwood A. C. Girls Dominate Swim Meet

Doris Cant and Jane Stickrod Outstanding In D. C. A. A. U. Meet Here; Bill Wright Wins 100-Meter Freestyle; Airport Divers in Sweep

Broadwood A. C. of Philadelphia furnished reasons why its swimmers constantly rank among the country's finest last night as two of its chattels, Jane Stickrod and Doris Cant, completely stole the show at the District A. A. U. meet at East Potomac.

Miss Stickrod, Middle Atlantic 220-yard free style indoors champ, added the outdoor junior laurels in this event to her list, barely edging out Dot Poe, of the Dayton (Ohio) Aquatic Club. Her time, 2:46.3, fell one second shy of the national record.

Miss Cant broke the only record of the evening, clipping five full seconds off the old meet mark in capturing the 100-meter backstroke. Miss Cant, in contrast to her Philadelphia companion, had a comparatively easy time in recording her victory. Miss Cant holds the championship in the Middle Atlantic Senior backstroke for women.

Local prestige was upheld by Bill Wright of the Washington Golf and Country Club who scored a decisive victory in the 100-meter free style for men. His most serious competition came from a teammate, Gordon Mustin.

The Airport Pool's crack diving team made virtually a grand slam in the springboard end of the meet, taking five of the awarded six places. Bill Tarbett, District titleholder, successfully defended his laurels.

The 50-meter breaststroke event for boys under 15 was significant in that it marked the defeat of Leo Jarboe, national boys' club champion. Oddly enough, his conqueror was his Washington Boys' Club mate, Robert Benson.

50-METER FREE STYLE (for girls under 15)—Won by Jean Dodder (Shoreham); second, Jackie Freer (Washington Golf and Country); third, Betty Roland (Shoreham); fourth, Jackie Kinsey (Airport). Time, 37.2.

Arlington Aces Upset Scholl's Ten

The Arlington Aces girls' softball team sprang a big upset last night by defeating Sholl's Cafeteria girls, 1939 city champions, by a 10-6 score at Potomac Park. Arlington outhit the champions, 14-7.

In scoring their first victory over Sholl's, the Aces did it with a vengeance. Marge Crickenberger led the Arlington attack with three hits, while "Snooky" Stevens, May Graul and Ann de Butts made two each off Pitcher Dot Keady.

an improvement over Bonura. With Jersey City is Mickey Vernon, fielding gracefully and beating out an imposing .325 average for the Giants' farm team. At Charlotte, in the Piedmont League, Griffith also owns Jack Sanford, best first baseman in that circuit.

Sanford is not as finished a fielder as Vernon, but he promises to be a powerful help with the bat. A tall, raw-boned lad, Sanford is the pnysical double of Schoolboy Rowe, of the Tigers, and for most of the season has been leading the Piedmont League at bat. Currently he is hitting .346. Sanford is a line-drive hitter and, unlike Vernon, right-handed.

Griffith, however, will not call in either Vernon or Sanford until the fag-end of the season. Vernon is on loan to Jersey City for the duration of the International League campaign and Griffith is powerless to recall him earlier. With Charlotte in the thick of the Piedmont pennant fight, the Nats' owner is in no mood to deprive that club of Sanford.

In any new first base emergency on the Nats, Bucky Harris could mee it by restoring Ossie Bluege to the active list. Bluege has played first base on occasion and given the club excellent protection.

The Nats' bosses were immensely relieved by the X-ray pictures which showed Leonard's injury to be merely a bruised wrist. They had held fear that the wrist was fractured by Johnny Berardino's line drive into the box Sunday which forced Leonard's retirement, and the implications were profound. Without Leonard, the Nats would be headed for the cellar. He will miss only one pitching turn at most.

The Nats' Western trip opens in Detroit today where they start a three-game series with the league-leading Tigers, who are playing the hottest ball in the league.

Pitcher Joe Haynes and Coach Clyde Milan did not accompany the club as it entrained for the West last night. Haynes is suffering from a lame elbow on his pitching arm and will undergo treatment in Washingotn for the next two weeks. Milan is under doctor's care for a slight infection.

Hasty and Rivers Combine To Hurl No-Hit, No-Run Game

Two Pitch Perfect Ball as Central Branch Beats Western Division, 4-0, in Boys' League

Choosing an outstanding occasion for an outstanding performance, Bill Hasty and Bill Rivers together pitched a no-hit, no-run game as Central Division blanked Western Division, 4-0, yesterday in the annual All-Star classic of the Washington Boys Club Baseball League.

Rivers worked the first four innings and drove in what proved to be the winning run with a single that sent across two mates in the second inning. Hasty relieved Rivers in the fifth and extended the hitless string. Each pitcher fanned two batters, while neither issued a walk.

After the first inning in which a double play prevented a score by a runner who reached first on an error, not a Western Division player got to third.

Lampros and Polmamis divided the pitching duties for the losers and turned in a creditable job that probably would have won most games. They gave up only seven hits and between them struck out four.

U. S.-Japanese Tension Seen Plan to Aid Axis

Friction Held Deliberate To Hold American Fleet in Pacific

By the United Press

Shanghai (Tuesday), July 23.—Belief was growing today among neutral diplomats that certain sections of the Japanese army favoring a close agreement with Germany were instigating Japanese-American tension deliberately with a view to keeping the United States fleet in the Pacific while Adolf Hitler prepares for a knockout blow against Great Britain.

Diplomats called attention to a recent statement in Tokyo by Toshio Shiratori, a leading advocate of the proposed German-Japanese alliance, asserting that Japan already is fulfilling her function in support of the Axis powers by forcing a retention of the United States fleet in the Pacific.

The general belief here was that the new Konoye government in Tokyo is oppsed to the tactics of the Japanese army in China, which has magnified every street quarrel between Japanese and Americans into the proportions of a diplomatic "incident," but that it is not yet in a position to exercise full authority over all Japanese agents in this country.

Mediation Likely

These observers believe the new government is anxious to carry forward the agreement reached with Britain under which the British have stopped shipment of war materials into nationalist China and would like to use Britain to obtain a compromise agreement with the Chungking government to end the Chinese-Japanese war.

Mediation is unlikely, however, as long as the United States continues aggressive action to support continued Chinese resistance to Japan.

The latest Japanese-American quarrel is at Tsingtao, Japanese base in Shantung Province which long has been used by the American Navy. United States naval authorities there canceled all shore leaves Saturday night after Japanese authorities had registered a vigorous protest because of the alleged action of United States seamen police in refusing to permit the arrest of two American bluejackets who were involved in a street quarrel.

Japanese Reported Injured

The Japanese claimed that a Japanese was injured in the incident and that their police were "humiliated."

Meanwhile, in Shanghai, Hallett Abend, correspondent of the New York Times, and other American newspapermen blacklisted by the Japanese-controlled Nanking government, prepared a message to President Roosevelt asking the United States Government to inform Japan that it will be held strictly accountable for the safety of American residents in China.

The message followed an attack on Abend early Saturday by two Japanese and the assassination of Samuel H. Chang, widely known Chinese-American journalist and businessman.

Census Lists D. C. as 11th Largest City

Capital Surpasses San Francisco In Population

Washington is the Nation's eleventh largest city, it was disclosed yesterday when preliminary census returns from San Francisco showed the Capital had overtaken the West Coast city in the last decade's population race.

With a count of 629,553 residents, San Francisco dropped to twelfth place. The Capital's 1940 population is 663,153, an increase of 36 per cent over 1930.

Previous census reports showed that Washington, in fourteenth place in 1930, also displaced Milwaukee from thirteenth place and Buffalo from twelfth place.

The 1940 returns, subject to revision, stack up the Nation's greatest cities like this:

New York, 7,380,259; Chicago, 3,384,556; Philadelphia, 1,935,086; Detroit, 1,618,549; Los Angeles, 1,496,792; Cleveland, 574,305; Baltimore, 854,144; St. Louis, 813,748; Boston, not yet reported but 781,488 in 1930; Pittsburgh, 665,384; Washington, 663,153, and San Francisco, 629,553.

How to Keep Cool? Stop Worrying, Ruhland Advises

If the heat hasn't gotten you yet, don't worry and it won't, said Health Officer George C. Ruhland yesterday.

He issued a few hints on how to beat the heat and topping the list was a caution against worrying. Take it easy and keep your mind free from troublesome thoughts, was his advice.

He suggested also that heat sufferers wear as few clothes as possible. And they should be light in color, said Dr. Ruhland—dark colors attract heat waves.

Curb your appetite, eat more salads, fruit and milk and less meats, fats and sweets, the health officer advised.

Luxembourg Royalty to Land At Annapolis

Refugees Expected To Arrive Thursday On U. S. Cruiser

Royal refugees from invaded Luxembourg, Prince Consort Felix, two princes and four princesses, will arrive at Annapolis, Md., aboard the U. S. S. Trenton not later than 10 a. m. Wednesday, the Navy Department said yesterday.

The precise hour of arrival was not disclosed. There were unconfirmed reports yesterday that the prince consort would be welcomed at Washington by the President.

Plans for receiving the party, which includes, besides the prince consort, Prince Juan, Prince Charles and Princesses Adelaide, Gabrielle, Elizabeth and Alix, are undetermined, the State Department said.

Hughes Le Gallais, Luxembourg Charge de Affaires, told The Post Friday that the royal party would be guests at the Long Island estate of Joseph E. Davies, special assistant to the Secretary of State. No change in this plan has been announced.

The legation yesterday directed all inquiries concerning the party to the State Department on grounds that preparations for the reception were being made there.

The Charge de Affaires will meet the party when it disembarks, the legation said.

The legation last week said the royal children would be put in American schools. The party, with servants, were granted passage on the United States cruiser as a diplomatic courtesy.

Cleanliness Backers to See Commissioners

New Association Emphasizes It'll Work For Neater Capital

The Outdoor Cleanliness Association of the District of Columbia intends to send representatives to the District Commissioners at an early date to discuss how best the Capital's streets and other public places can be kept clean.

The association, which has received a certificate of incorporation, emphasized yesterday that it is not a seasonal organization, but one which will consistently work in cooperation with other bodies for a clean Washington.

The meeting with the Commissioners will bring up local regulations governing the cleaning of public places and appropriations for such activities.

Jesse C. Suter, acting president in the absence from Washington of Harry A. Garfield, the president, said the new organization would begin more determined activities when several of the prominent members who are out of the city return.

Apparently stirred by the clean-up campaign, a citizen, who requested that his name be withheld, complained to The Post yesterday about an alleged practice of garbagemen in tipping over garbage cans and leaving various-sized piles of garbage in the alleyways behind them. Rats and flies consequently are attracted, the citizen complained.

Homes Offered Child Refugees Being Checked

Volunteer social workers from public and private organizations yesterday began investigating homes here offered to European refugee children, to compile an approved list before their arrival.

The Washington Committee for the Care of European Children went ahead with its preparations, in line with the resolution adopted in New York by the United States Committee.

This resolution stated that "in the absence of affirmative disapproval of the British government," the committee was prepared to receive children "whose parents or guardians are willing to assume the responsibility of having such children cross the Atlantic Ocean on ships which may or may not be convoyed."

Must Assume Risks

The United States Committee for the Care of Refugee Children has made a request through Lord Lothian, the British Ambassador, that before granting an exit permit for children wishing to come to the United States, the British government should assure itself that the parents or guardians "fully realize that the child is being sent at its own risk and on the parents' or guardians' responsibility."

No word has been received here of any young refugees arriving in this country or Canada over the wek-end, the Washington committee said yesterday, in response to inquiries about reports that a "children's refugee ship" had escaped a submarine in the Atlantic recently. Mrs. W. A. Roberts, secretary of the Council of Social Agencies, where the committee's headquarters are located, issued the statement.

Fifty Homes Offered Here

Institutions in the District alone have offered accommodations for about 50 child refugees, and more applications are being received daily at the council offices, 1101 M street northwest, it was announced.

A committee in London is proceeding full speed in identifying and classification of children for early movement, according to reports relayed from the council office here.

A condensed program announced today through C. M. Chichester, secretary of the Virginia association, and Bernard Sclove, of Charleston, secretary of the West Virginia association, shows that Gov. Price, Claude M. Dean, clerk of the United States Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals; Judge John L. Ingram, of Richmond, and William R. Shands, director of the State division of legislative research and drafting will be among the speakers.

Auto Makers Strive to Speed Change-Over

Toolmaker Scarcity May Delay Some, Says Authority

By the Associated Press

Detroit, July 22.—The motorcar plants now in the midst of the annual change-over to new models are making every effort to swing back into production as rapidly as possible, says Ward's Reports in its current issue, but some may be delayed by the scarcity of toolmakers.

Practically without exception, says the trade publication, sales during the first third of July were "surpassingly good. . . . It is entirely possible to anticipate that July registrations, when finally compiled will prove better than those of June. Although this has happened once before since model introductions began in the fall—during 1937—it is abnormal, and it is the more abnormal now because this year's model span is much neared its end than in 1937.

Pay Roll Gains Help

"General belief is that much of the steam behind the present advance is due to prevailing belief that car prices are destined to go up in 1941. . . . Also of import is the stimulating effect of the rearmament program. Industrial pay rolls are gaining as a result of this program, and money is freer."

Commenting more directly on the arms program, Ward's says:

"Belief is expressed in well-informed Detroit circles that it may be as long as a year before any concrete evidences of fruition of the rearmament program may be manifested. Reason is not inability of the Government to decide what should be done, nor is it inability of industry to move into output. The fact is very simple—that the problems involved are so immense and the program so tremendous that there can be no thought of overnight accomplishment."

Ford '6' Due Soon

In its survey of activities of the various plants, the publication says:

"It now appears that the widely heralded Ford '6' is destined for actual production in the next several weeks. It is said to be the 'L' head job that has long been under test. Its approximate dimensions are 3 3-16 inch bore by 4 stroke. This job is to be interchangeable, thus permitting the installation of a 6-75 horsepower, 8-85 horsepower or 8-95 horsepower in the different chassis.

"It is also reported that the tractor four-cylinder engine is to be offered in a light delivery unit, thus providing a four, a six and two eight-cylinder engines for the various Ford vehicles.

Retail Sales Soar

Detroit, July 22 (AP).—Retail sales of passenger automobiles and trucks during the first six months of this year totaled 2,167,218, according to figures just issued by the Automobile Manufacturers Association. In the like period of 1939 sales totaled 1,686,988 cars and trucks.

The association placed retail sales for June of this year at 350,968 passenger cars and 51,273 commercial vehicles, the combined total being 33.2 per cent greater than that of June a year ago.

Leaf Quota Plan Voted, Grower's Expect Price Rise

Atlanta, July 22 (AP).—Bright leaf tobacco farmers looked today to their better than four-to-one approval of Federal control of their crops to help bolster prices from last year's sag.

Producers in six Southeastern States expressed themselves Saturday overwhelmingly in favor of Government restriction for three years.

In Georgia, 84.7 per cent of those voting favored control; in North Carolina, 86 per cent; South Carolina, 88.7; Virginia, 76.5, and Florida, 87.9.

In a preballoting statement, Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace told the growers that quotas would not likely be set below the current figures if they accepted the long-range program.

The program adopted consists of setting up a national quota after it is determined how much tobacco may be produced without glutting markets or creating unsalable surpluses. Land needed to produce that much tobacco will then be apportioned among the growers.

Northeast Assets Show 17% Gain

Shareholders of the Northeast Building Association, who met recently for the annual election, were told by Secretary S. Schuyler Symons that a gain of 17 per cent in assets was registered during the fiscal year ending June 30 as compared to the same period of 1939.

Assets at the close of business June 30, 1939, were $1,464,000, while the balance sheet this year totals $1,701,000.

John L. Sherwood was re-elected president and other officers re-elected were: W. S. Torbert, vice president and general counsel; H. C. Althoff, vice president, Mr. Symons, secretary; A. E. Cowles, assistant secretary; J. E. Payne, treasurer, and H. R. Engelbrecht, assistant treasurer. Directors reappointed were J. F. Belfield, R. J. Boehs, A. L. Foster, J. B. Rubino, Eugene H. Phifer and the officers.

Market Scores Point in Sale Of Large Block

23,000 Shares Sold Within 38-Cent Range On 'Thin' Market

By the Associated Press

New York, July 22.—The New York Stock Echange today scored an important point in its campaign to prevent a seepage of securities business into "private" channels and away from the exchange floor.

Acting for a securities company, an exchange member marketed on the floor today 23,000 shares of Kennecott Copper at prices ranging from $24.62 a share for one block of 20,900 shares to $25 for the remainder.

The securities company previously sought to gain permission from the exchange to market the stock by private negotiation off the exchange on the theory a better than official market price could be thus obtained. There has been complaint for a year or more that markets in the stock echange have become very thin, making the marketing of large individual blocks of shares almost impossible except at great sacrifice to the seller.

In this instance, exchange officials took a hand, canvassed the Kennecott market and helped the seller get a price substantially better than ordinarily would be obtained in a private transaction.

Exchange authorities figured that an outside sale would have netted the seller around $23 a share, or 2 points down from the floor market. That difference would have amounted to $'6,000 for the 23,000 shares.

As the sale was made the average price was only about one-fourth of a point away from the market, a discount of about $5,700, and total brokerage commissions were $3,450.

Chicago Mart Takes Steps

Chicago, July 22 (AP).—The Chicago Stock Exchange has appointed a special committee to consider plans for expansion of the exchange, Chairman Arthur M. Betts announced today.

Members of the committee holding its first meeting today, include five governors of the exchange and four businessmen advisers.

"The special committee will give prompt consideration to the stimulation of new listing applications, trading hours, commission rates and membership eligibility, Betts stated. "The committee will not, however, be limited in any way in the scope of subjects for study."

Today's action was the Chicago market's answer to the New York exchange's threats to expel its members, also members of other exchanges, if they continued to act as specialists for the local markets in dually listed issues.

Labor 'Pirating'

By Merryle S. Rukeyser

The Shift of Skilled Workers

Under the stress of emotion, men of business, like other citizens, are subject to what might be called "band wagon" thinking.

For a decade, Americans have been especially prone to this tendency.

In a quasi-academic spirit, now and again theorists and their disciples have brought forward plausible sweeping formulae for suddendly bringing betterment in national material well-being.

There has been a naive assumption that we as a pople could prosper the easy way instead of the hard way, through exercise of thrift and industry.

In connection with the enlarged national defense program, there is some tendency to dwell on short cuts for meeting the alleged shortages of skilled workers and at the same time to insist that the recruits for expanding industrial production should be taken directly from the ranks of the unemployed.

Plausible as the latter demand seems, it needs to be analyzed. B. C. Heacock, president of the Caterpillar Tractor Co., Peoria, Ill., as attempting to do his own thinking, and amidst the current band wagon psychology his dissenting opinions are especially timely, with the example of France before us, which fell because no one was permitted to question the premise of the inviolability of the Maginot Line, we must be alert to avoid the danger of uxed ideas and unchallenged theories.

Approaching the labor problem from the standpoint of an uncommonly successful filler of pay envelopes, Mr. Heacock points out:

"I am not sure that my thinking of the skilled labor problem is quite orthodox. I rather believe that so long as we have millions unemployed, there is no shortage of any class of labor. As I see, it works something like this:

"During periods of slack employment, we keep the most efficient men. That generally means, of course, the most highly skilled men. As employment increases, we continually hire back the best that is available, leaving the dregs until the last.

"As business picks up and the unemployed are reabsorbed in work, the good men who have been employed all of the time are given better jobs.

"We don't have to train the millions who are now out of employment to begin at the top of the heap. In the first place, that can't be done, and in the second place, though it could be done, it would not be fair to the men who are now at work. Surely it is infinitely easier to train the men who are now at work, all the way from top to bottom, for a little higher class work, and plug the newcomers in at the bottom, where little, if any, training is needed. Then they get their training on the job."

In summing up, the Illinois businessman added:

"Now, of course, it is true that once in a while some particular shop will need some truly skillful men, say, maybe toolmakers, and maybe they will offer such attractive employment as to bring workers to them from other shops. Here again throughout the whole process, as the best that are now available are drawn into better jobs, those underneath come up. Recently other communities—one in particular—have hired several of our good men. That is perfectly O. K. with us. It simply made several opportunities to advance other men here.

"Some people call this labor pirating. So far as I am concerned, it is only illustrative of the glorious fact that American workmen are, to a large extent, mobile and versatile and follow good opportunities wherever they are presented. It is the working of the law of supply and demand, and it makes me happy every time I hear of a man getting a better job."

20,000-Share Sale of Kennecott Saves Day From Being Dullest Since 'Confucius Era'

New York, July 22.—Some of these days a man is going to bite a dog, cows will give chocolate milk shakes and there won't be an unbalanced budget. Maybe, but the day was not today. It may have been because it was the fourth Monday in July or it may have been that the stars didn't align themselves in quite the proper manner, or it may have been the humidity and not the heat, but be that as it may it was another dull day in Wall Street.

There was danger for a while that a new record since the days of Confucius was about to be established, at which, no doubt, the flags would have been flown at quarter mast, but someone wanted to get rid of 20,000 or more shares of Kennecott in the late dealings and that upset all calculations. As a result, Kennecott was the day's most active stock, surpassing Loft, the well-known vendor of candy and soft drinks.

Another Dead Day

These are days when the final thrust of totalitarian states against democracy are only hours away and when this particular stronghold of democracy is threatened by an individual who regards himself as indispensable to us as Hitler regards himself in the German situation. Yet in the financial center of this great nation there was nothing that could not have been put over until tomorrow, or maybe a few weeks or months from now. It was another dead day, in which investors were afraid to move. If they weren't actually afraid, it didn't make any difference; for they would not have known what to do anyway.

They were waiting for the threatened blitzkreig on England and for some reassurance that this country is not going to follow the popular trend and let its affairs come too much under one-man control.

Indecision Dominates

This may be a long wait, and a painful one, but there is no question but that the war and domestic politics, which have taken such threatening turns in the last few days, have the investing public in a position where it doesn't know what to expect. Nothing but such indecision could explain the otherwise unexplainable inactive and minor price changes which have characterized the stock market for this entire month.

In today's dealings, the composite average recorded a gain of 0.03 point, which is not enough to call for an order to stop the presses. The volume was 227,120 shares on the big board. The total would have come threateningly close to records of 1918 had it not been for the above mentioned single transaction of 20,900 shares in Kennecott. This meant about $350 in commissions for the broker who handled the sell order and also for the one handling the buy order, so possibly it may have been a profitable day for Wall Street after all.

Steels Slightly Higher

To get down to the actual backings and fillings of this and that security on the greatest market of the richest country in the world, it must be recorded that steels were slightly higher, followed by the aviations and motors. Minor recessions were recorded by the equipments, utilities and rails. There was no stock in the list of the 15 most active that moved as much as a point from its close of last week. The widest fluctuation was in Loft, which was down ⅞.

A newcomer to the above list was Alaska Juneau, which gained an eighth. The golds have been distinguished by their absence in recent months. Both Third Avenue and Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit broke into the list, moving slightly higher on the prospect of eventual unification. Steels were moderately higher, United States Steel, Bethlehem and Republic moving up by fractions. Standard Oil of New Jersey was well supported in the oil division.

Inactives Move Widely

Virtually all of the price changes of more than a point were in inactive common stocks or preferrd issues which have not appeared on the tape much recently. National Lead preferred A lost 3 points and and B gained a like amount, while the common was unchanged, which gives some rough idea of the way in which the investment world is attuned to every little change in the business outlook. American Ami, 4; Diamond Match preferred, Smelting preferred lost 3½; Bon 1¼; General Cigar preferred, 1½, and United Stores preferred, 1½. These moves, naturally, had no connection with the general market.

Bonds in Doldrums

Listed bond trading moved further into the doldrums today, with a turnover of only $2,964,000, of the smallest day's business since August 14, 1939. Indicative was a turnover of 16 bonds of the United States Treasury, changes in these issues being inconsequential. Best grade corporate loans showed some small advances, owing to the lack of new registrations. The speculative groups of foreign and domestic bonds were irregular.

N. A. S. D. Board Approves Change In Securities Act

Chicago, July 22 (AP).—Governors of the National Association of Securities Dealers today approved recent action of its national representatives in reaching an agreement with the Securities and Exchange Commission on proposed revision of 20-day "incubation" clause of the Securities Act of 1933.

The board and advisory council of the N. A. S. D. is holding a two-day meeting here.

Endorsement of the action on the 20-day clause of the Securities Act was given after the national representatives expressed a belief that an alteration of the 20-day waiting period for new issues of securities could be accomplished at this session of Congress.

Minimum Prices Due for Soft Coal

By the Associated Press

Secretary Ickes said yesterday that minimum sale prices for 12,000 bituminous coal producers—who produce 90 to 95 per cent of the Nation's commercial coal—would be handed down this week.

When the prices are announced, an order setting the date for them to become effective is to be set in an accompanying order.

Participation in the price arrangement is optional under the Coal Act, but operators who remain outside and sell their coal at any price they choose are subject to a 19½ per cent tax.

Texas Calls Oil Proration Parley

Austin, Tex., July 22 (AP).—The Texas Railroad Commission today called a State-wide oil proration hearing August 1 and invited Harry F. Sinclair, of New York, to attend.

Sinclair, whose purchasing company recently posted a price cut for North and Central Texas crude, had expressed an intention to cooperate with the State oil regulatory body in any moves intended to remedy the situation.

The chairman of the board for the Consolidated Oil Corporations, which controls Sinclair properties, has stated he believed there was too large a spread between the price of crude and finished products.

Corn Buoyant As Wheat List Again Drops

Excessive Heat In Corn Belt Leads To Fractional Gain

By the Associated Press

Corn emerged from a droopy commodities list yesterday with new gains ranging from ¼ to ⅜ of a cent a bushel.

Excessively hot weather in the corn belt accounted for the upturn. Its more important Chicago Board of Trade running mate—wheat—again dropped under the force of hedging sales. The close was ½ to 1 cent a bushel down. July wheat sold at the lowest for any contract since last September.

The New York commodities futures division showed uneven prices and not much activity. Cotton finished unchanged to 10 cents a bale lower. Hides slid down .40 to .44 of a cent a pound. Copper contracts and wool tops gave up a little ground.

New Drive Started By Cotton Institute

New York, July 22 (AP).—The Cotton-Textile Institute has launched a program to increase American cotton consumption by 25 per cent over its record peak.

The program, aiming at pushing domestic consumption to 10,000,000 bales a year, will integrate the merchandising, promotion and research efforts of the industry with the sales and advertising efforts of the country's wholesale and retail distributive outlets.

The governors of the American Cotton Manufacturers Association have approved the program.

Failures Show Gain

New York, July 22 (AP).—Business failures during the week ended July 18 reached the highest total since the week of June 20, Dun & Bradstreet reported today. The latest total of 288 compared with 261 in the previous week and 251 a year ago.

Holders of Alien Money Find Exchange Dealt Paralyzing Blow by European War

By the Associated Press

New York, July 22.—Upheaval in Europe has dealt a paralyzing blow to the ancient trade of money-changing, hardy survivor of centuries of war, revolution and economic trials.

For the first time in the experience of veteran money dealers in Wall street, it has become virtually impossible to carry on foreign exchange freely with Europe, erstwhile tourist paradise and richest market for foreign trade.

Nazi conquests of such European money centers as Amsterdam and Paris hit the complex international money-changing machinery in vital spots. Trade with the continent came to an abrupt standstill after the fall of France, except for a thin flow of business by way of Spain and Portugal.

England Clamps Down

Now England has clamped down rigid wartime controls on the pound sterling, long the pivot of world-wide money dealings. What Wall street called the "free" sterling market—where buyers and sellers had room to test their own ideas of values—has been thinned down to a few scattered transactions under recently imposed rules giving the British control full powers over the market.

What this means in everyday terms of changing a few pounds or francs into American currency soon becomes clear to war refugees and repatriated Americans newly arrived in the land of the almighty dollar.

Shopping among the money dealers of lower Manhattan, at the foreign money windows of the tourist services, a traveler with a purse of strange currency usually can find some kind of market. But often he can acquire the dollar only by paying a stiff premium to compensate the buyer for the risk of shippnig the currency back to Europe in wartime and getting it by the maze of controls.

Forced Sacrifices

Hundreds of refugees in need of ready cash have had to sacrifice their francs or sterling for what the speculative market would offer. The French currency, quoted around 2 cents in terms of the dollar before the collapse of France, brought only half a cent for a time. Lately the open market—some call it the "black bourse" in the absence of official quotations—has climbed back above a cent.

The British pound—officially quoted at $4.02½ to $4.03½ (if you can get it by passing scrutiny of the wartime control)—dropped as low as $2.50 for actual currency on this side of the Atlantic on the surrender of France, dealers said.

The "street" market for British currency has come back above $3.

By diligent shopping among dealers it usually is possible to find some kind of market for Netherlands guilders, Belgian belgas and other currencies blotted out of the official markets by the Nazi juggernaut. But dealers say the amount of business done in the lesser currencies is so small they regard inquiries for prices as a matter of academic interest unless the curious asker can really show some coin or paper.

Horse-Trading Status

In the downtown money shops, where a museum-display of exotic currencies often advertises the business, the explanation usually given for the spreads between official and "black bourse" quotations is this:

"We have to allow for wartime risks and for the costs of shipping and insurance."

Cited among intangible risks of dealing in continental currencies is uncertainty just what kind of money system may be set up there. There is talk in financial circles of a single continental currency in event Germany succeeds in building a federated Europe for economic purposes, revolving about the Rome-Berlin political axis.

Like the political future, the money outlook is described by dealers as doubtful until peace returns and the future economic system in Europe takes definite shape.

For more than a century, during the growth of world trade, London was the money center of the world and the British pound the kingpin of the money-changing trade.

Now Berlin aspires to become the money hub, at least for the continent. Nobody watches Hitler's moves more closely than do the shrewd men wh practice the time-glided trade of money-changing.

If the people around WJSV don't get to know a gentleman, name of Westbrook Van Voorhees pretty well before Thursday night, it certainly can't be called Mr. Van Vorhees' fault. Because between Monday and Friday he'll have paid us just 40 visits.

Van Voorhees is the possessor of that authoritative, unmistakable voice you hear on "The March of Time." And he's in town to announce as often as he can that "The Ramparts We Watch," the new movie on America's defenses produced by "The March of Time," is to be seen at Keith's Theater starting tonight.

All in all, he's making 139 such announcements on three Washington stations within the four days. It pleases us to report that he uses an automobile. What pleases Mr. Van Voorhees is that someone else drives it, the probability being that if he had to park it himself those announcements could never be made.

The premiere of "Ramparts" is to be a pretty gala affair, as we understand it—notables, dignitaries, invitations and so forth. Gunnar Back and Hugh Conover will be under the Keith marquee tonight to bring WJSV listeners a report on who's there and interviews with them. The broadcast is from 7:30 to 7:55 p. m.

ContractBridge

By Florence Osborne.

Brilliant new players would do well to remember some of the old principles, such as the one recommended by Frank K. Perkins, former chess champion. Says the Boston expert, "The longer the suit, the greater the chance that missing cards will split evenly in the hands of the enemy." And today's hand, misplayed by one of the smart young champions, is an example to prove it.

Today's Hand

Both Sides Vulnerable.

SOUTH DEALER.

	♠ A J 9 3 ♡ A 7 4 ◇ 6 2 ♣ Q 9 7 2
♠ 7 6 ♡ K Q 10 3 ◇ J 10 8 5 ♣ K 5 3	NORTH WEST EAST SOUTH	♠ 4 2 ♡ J 8 6 2 ◇ 9 7 ♣ A J 8 6 4
	♠ K Q 10 8 5 ♡ 9 5 ◇ A K Q 4 3 ♣ 10

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 ◇	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
5 ♣	Pass	6 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: K ♡.

The contract was six spades; dummy won the ace of hearts on the first lead, and two rounds of trumps were taken. The ace, king and queen of diamonds were cashed with dummy tossing a heart, but the diamonds failed to break, and a fourth diamond had to be trumped in dummy. This left declarer with a good diamond in his hand on which he could discard the last heart, but he had no way to reach his hand except by using up dummy's last trump. The result was a set of one.

"On winning the heart, declarer should cash his ace and king of diamonds, ruff a low diamond with one of dummy's high trumps," explains Perkins. "Two rounds of trumps would take the adverse spades and leave South in the lead. The queen and another diamond would let dummy discard the two heart losers; and there would be a trump in dummy to ruff the heart.

"'Your plan would fail unless the trumps split two-two,' objected the declarer when I called it to his attention. 'That is true,' I replied, 'but the actual plan must go down unless diamonds split three-three, and since the trump suit is the longer, there is a better chance for trumps to break.'"

Ashurst Urges Bill to Deport Harry Bridges

Coast C. I. O. Leader 'Evil and Unhappy Man,' Senator Asserts

Senator Ashurst (Democrat), of Arizona, pleaded with the Senate yesterday to give speedy approval to a bill ordering the deportation of Harry Bridges, West Coast CIO leader.

Terming Bridges an "evil and unhappy man," Senator Ashurst reminded his colleagues that the House had passed the Bridges deportation bill several weeks ago and it now was pending before the Senate Immigration Committee.

"All too long the American people have been tortured by this evil man," the Arizona Senator said.

"The enemy hammering on the gates from within is even more dangerous than the enemy hammering on the gates from without."

Ashurst said he had received "many letters" urging that the Senate Judiciary Committee speed action on the deportation bill.

"We must remember the recent melancholy and bloody history of Norway, the Netherlands, Belgium and especially France where the enemy operated from within," Senator Ashurst said.

Senator Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, joined in the plea for Senate approval of the Bridges deportation measure, saying that Bridges was opposed to "the American system of government."

"Too long we have coddled these Communist, Nazi, Fascist and criminal aliens who are enemies of this Government," Reynolds boomed.

Senator Schwellenbach (Democrat), of Washington, interrupted to say that Senate recesses for the political conventions had made it impossible for an Immigration subcommittee to act on the Bridges' bill.

Chairman Russell (Democrat), of Georgia, of the Immigration Committee suggested that Ashurst "see the subcommittee handling the legislation and express his views before that forum rather than before the Senate."

"This bill is being treated as any other piece of legislation," Russell declared.

Navy Relates How New Deal Built It Up

President Roosevelt's third term campaign was pictured in some circles as getting under way yesterday with the distribution from Navy Department sources of a mimeographed treatise enitled "The Decline and Rise of United States Naval Power."

Complete with colored charts, the document pictures the Navy's strength as declining from first to fourth place from 1921 to 1933, which coincided with three Republican administrations, and greatly gaining from 1933 on, when the Roosevelt regime took control.

Political parties were not mentioned, but the charts and text continuously contrasted 1921-33 with 1933-40. No reason for its publication was included in the treatise, though a naval official said it was prepared to "answer numerous queries from members of Congress and others as to the Navy's strength.

Appears at White House

The circumstances under which it was made public, however, and its content caused many observers to conclude it was the latest Administrative offensive in the war over who is responsible for the recent condition of American defenses.

It first appeared on the bulletin board of the White House press room with a notation from Secretary Stephen Early's office that copies were available at the Navy Department. The Navy press room disclaimed any knowledge of it for several hours and then upon checking with the White House, reporters were told that Assistant Secretary Lewis Compton, Democratic aid to Republican Secretary Frank Knox, had copies of the document. They were given out from his office.

The statement declares that in 1921 the United States had in ships built and building the most powerful Navy in the world. Telling of the scrapping of $277,000,000 worth of warships under the terms of the naval limitation treaty of 1922, the statement declares, "with those ships we would today have a more powerful battle line than we can hope to have in the next six years."

Replacements Not Made

Adding that in 1930, the Government agreed to scrap 206 more warships, the treatise added, "thus we reduced the Nations' naval defense by a fleet almost as large as our entire fleet today."

But, declared the statement, we not only "sacrificed" ships, we also didn't build any replacements. Of some 150 combatant ships we were allowed to lay down between 1922 and 1933, we actually did lay down only 25 and completed 14" it was stated.

Contrasting the results of the "period of decline," the statement then recites the achievements of the "period of rise." In the past seven years, it states, we have commissioned more ships than the total number of underage vessels we had in 1933, the naval air arm "has been doubled and raised to an enviable state of efficiency," the personnel of the Navy has increased 60 per cent and naval research has been intensified and produced far reaching results.

Annenberg Starts to Prison

Chicago, July 22.—M. L. Annenberg, who has agreed to pay the United States Treasury $8,000,000 in settlement of civil tax claims, was on his way to prison tonight to pay a three-year penalty for violating the Federal tax laws.

The gaunt Philadelphia publisher, portrayed by his counsel as a man who was "broken" in health and "shackled" with debt, surrendered shortly before noon in the Loop office of an attorney.

He entered an automobile with U. S. Marshal William H. McDonnell and Deputy Joseph Thinnes and started the 720-mile trip toward the Government penitentiary at Lewisburg, Pa.

Annenberg's surrender marked the end of the Chicago phases of the largest criminal tax case against an individual in the Government's history.

Now 63, Annenberg would be eligible for parole in one year's time. If he received the maximum time off for good behavior, he could be released after serving two years and 113 days.

Annenberg pleaded guilty to evading $1,217,296 in taxes on his 1936 earnings. That constituted one of six counts alleging failure to pay $5,548,384 in levies, penalties and interest on his 1932-36 income. The prosecution has agreed to dismiss all remaining charges.

He promised to pay the Treasury $8,000,000—plus penalties and interest that may increase the total ultimately to $10,000,000—within the next six years to settle civil claims against him and his corporations that were calculated at approximately $12,000,000.

Judge James H. Wilkerson, who sentenced the publisher on July 1, rejected recently his plea for probation.
